Descendants of the Four Sons

How Found—Plan of the Work

The Genealogy is built up by generations from Thomas Sanford, the Founder of the Family, he being the first generation, his children the second, all his grand children the third and so on to the end.

This method of course brings all the descendants of the Four Sons of Thomas of each generation compactly together.

In any and in every generation the descendants of Ezekiel (oldest son) come first, followed in order by the descendants of Samuel, Thomas and Ephraim. This of course separates the descendants of each of the Four Sons.

For example, the descendants of Ephraim, fourth son of Thomas, are the last given in the seventh generation, (as they are the last given in every generation) and they are separated from his (Ephraim's) descendants of the eighth generation by the descendants of his three older brothers, Ezekiel, Samuel and Thomas preceding and intervening.

Since some may feel a closer and warmer tie of relationship to those who spring from the same Son of Thomas as themselves, the following tables have been prepared, telling and giving not only the pages but the numbers, where all the descendants of each of the Four Sons can readily be found.

To tell anywhere in the work which Son's descendants you are reading, just look at the first preceding descent cast (lineage line in italics), and the next to the last name there given, will be either Ezekiel, Samuel, Thomas or Ephraim, which, of course, tells you whose descendants they are.

The generation number, all through the work, is shown by the caption of the right hand page, and also by the superior (small) figure given with the first child in every family.

The plan, when once understood, will be found quite simple.

All the Descendants of Ezekiel Sanford will be found between the following pages and numbers:

My Dear Subscriber:

If, on a review of the Sanford Genealogy, you can find in it sufficient merit to warrant you in writing me a few kindly words, with liberty to print should I wish to do so, I would be greatly pleased.

Such letters, if I get them, will be my only reward for over five years of constant and patient toil upon the work, since a sale of the entire edition will only return my cash outlay.

Though several other attempts to get out a genealogy of the Family have been made in the past, no Sanford in the two hundred and seventy-seven years since Thomas Sanford came to our shores, has appeared, till now, with sufficient spirit and pride in the Family to give his time, his patience and his means to its accomplishment, or, at least, no one has done so in that time.

The edition of the work is small (only four hundred copies) and, in all probability, judging by the way they are being taken, will soon be exhausted, when no further copies can be had, since the work was not stereotyped.

Copies, so long as they last, can only be secured of the undersigned.

Since copies will be shipped to all the early subscribers direct from the printers, I ask each to kindly acknowledge to me the receipt of the work that I can check up the list and know that I have fulfilled my agreement.

If any party does not find his name or that of his ancestors in the index, he should next carefully consult the brief genealogies of Robert, Andrew, Zachary, John and William Sanford, Pioneers, in the Appendix, which have no index. The ancestors of practically all Sanfords in this country, save perhaps some in the South, descendants of the Pioneer Sanfords who early settled in Virginia, it is believed, may be found in the genealogies given in this work.

Every party desiring to investigate the work should first carefully read, "Descendants of the Four Sons," on page XI; "Key to Work," on page 88; "Other Pioneer Sanfords," on page 1333; and "Explanation," on page 1401, when, I am sure, no difficulty will arise in understanding the work.

In the belief that I have at least done something useful for the Family, I take much comfort and pride, whether worthily so or no.

Sincerely yours,

C. E. Sanford.

Preface

Ever since I was a boy on my father's farm I have been curious and anxious to know of my ancestors, whence they came, where they lived and died and what they were. As a boy I often asked my father about them, but since he was born far removed from the parent nest, Connecticut, I got but little help from him. Boy that I was I knew not how to learn of the family, and as I grew up cares and duties pressed, I must admit, these longings and desires to one side. Still, I hoped all the while that someone would undertake the task and compile a genealogical history of the Thomas Sanford family. From all that I could learn it was a large one and a good one, and deserving of a written history.

A Limited Work at First

In the "Early History of Hopkinton, N. Y." (1903), I found it necessary to give the families of Hon. Jonah Sanford (my grandfather) and Benjamin, his brother, two of the pioneers of the town, and I then decided that as soon as possible I would compile a genealogical history of the descendants of Jonah Sanford of Litchfield, Ct., my great, great, grandfather, with as much data and information as I could gather readily as to Thomas Sanford, the Pioneer.

Accordingly, in 1905 I began the work. I already had a little early data of the family, mostly obtained some years previous from Mrs. Rhoda S. Cowles, of Morris, Ct., an enthusiastic Sanford and most estimable lady, who died in 1893, aged ninety-two years. I had not been so very long in the work when I saw from the data that was coming to me outside the scope of the work I had planned that it should not be a limited work, but, instead, as full a genealogy of Thomas Sanford as could be gathered, and I accordingly changed my plans to that end. Had I then known what a task was before me, what I now know with the work nearly completed, I feel certain that I should not have done so. But I did, and now that I have passed through it, lived through it, I have no regrets to offer, and am glad I did change the plan since the family has thereby secured, what it has long sought and earned, a pretty full and complete genealogy.

The scope of the work decided upon, I sought out Sanfords in every way known to me, in newspapers, mercantile reports, directories, census reports, etc., sending to all circulars stating what I proposed to do and asking for help. The responses for a time were so few and infrequent that I confess, I was more or less discouraged. In this dilemma I engaged from time to time several expert genealogists who searched a good part of the western half of Connecticut (a great Sanford field) and many places in other states. This brought me a great amount of Sanford data, family records, etc., and put me on the track of living descendants in many instances. These found, the field began slowly to open, unfold and broaden and to continue to do so to this time, taking in nearly all the northern states, Canada and some of the southern states.

Reaching these actual living representatives of the Connecticut pioneers and Sanford families, I found a great many, but not all, quite willing to help me to the extent of their ability. Indeed, I came across quite a number who had in previous years gathered considerable data as to their immediate families, all of which they most freely and willingly turned over to me for my use. Several of these were of exceedingly great help. Everywhere, I found, what pleased me most of all, great pride in the family and an earnest desire to have a genealogy prepared. In several cases where I found "bunches" of Sanford data in the hands of those outside the family I bought it. I have spared no means where the result looked promising.

Need of an Assistant

Early in the work I discovered that with my own labors which I could not neglect, upon my hands, (President of The People's Bank) it would be utterly impossible for me to look after all the correspondence, detail, study of relationship and building of the genealogy, and so employed Miss Margaret Eastman for a time, and then Miss Rose W. Eastman, who has, day in and day out, for now nearly four years, most faithfully, carefully and skillfully toiled upon the work and for which I wish here to make public acknowledgment.

Other Attempts to Get Out a Genealogy

When I began this work I knew that Horatio Gates Sanford, of Gloucester, Mass., had worked more or less from 1880 to 1890 gathering data for a genealogy and that he had died with it incomplete and unfinished. I early went to Dorchester to make a deal for the data he had gathered but was unable to do so. In August, 1909, after I had been at work for nearly four years, I succeeded in purchasing all the papers, memoranda and data gathered by him. What he had secured which I had not already obtained, has been incorporated into this work. Though I did not get very much from this data which I did not already have, I did find among the papers a large number of very old and interesting deeds, papers and writings belonging to Ephraim Sanford and his immediate descendants, which settled several perplexing questions. The paper of greatest value and unqualified interest to all the living descendants of Thomas Sanford was a deed by him to his son Ephraim dated March 28, 1674, two hundred and thirty-six years ago and still legible. But few people now living can boast of the autograph signature of an ancestor who came to this country only fourteen years after the Pilgrims. A fac-simile of this old deed is given with the article on Thomas Sanford in America. Others of said old papers are particularly mentioned in the family of Ephraim and others to which the reader is referred.

I learn during my work that no less than three other attempts have been made in the past fifty years or so to get out a genealogy of the family, thus proving a sentiment that it was worthy of one. How many attempts were made prior to this I do not learn. All of them quit, gave it up, presumably owing to the great expense, time and labor required.

Efforts to Learn Our English Lineage

But what probably is of more moment and interest to Sanfords generally is the lineage and home of our ancestor in England. In the past hundred years various stories have been put afloat as to his ancestry, but none of them will stand the test of investigation or even close scrutiny. From the beginning of my work I have pursued my researches in England at heavy expense, hoping to learn our ancestor's parentage and whence he came. I am indeed pleased, even happy, to have met, though at the eleventh hour, with final and signal success in the effort, and I am sure all Sanfords everywhere will rejoice with me that our parentage and home in England have at last, after more than two hundred and fifty years of doubt and obscurity, been brought to light. (See articles by Mr. Hoppin and by the writer for fuller particulars.)

Not a Complete or Perfect Genealogy

The work is not, I am quite well aware, a complete, much less perfect genealogy of Thomas Sanford. To make such a work at this late date is utterly impossible. I have, however, worked out nearly all the early descendants, at least all of them where any clue or help was obtainable. The Sanfords were continually emigrating from Connecticut north into Vermont; west into the eastern part of New York, then into central New York and then on west. Quite a number left home so abruptly or went so far away or kept on moving from place to place westward that no clue to them is now obtainable. When a descendant of one of these is found in the west he can seldom give his lineage farther back than grandfather, which often lacks a generation or two of taking him to the parent nest to make his membership in the family certain. However, by persistent and unflagging effort following up every clue, I have run down, so to speak, and placed a great number, as my upward of sixteen thousand people, born Sanfords, fully attests. I could have added a considerable number of families of whom I learned or got trace, and to whom I wrote, in some cases many times, had they responded and helped me. Some of them, no doubt, thought that my effort was a money making scheme on my part, while others were too thoughtless and too indifferent to even make up their own family record. All such have no one to blame but themselves that they are not recorded herein.

Then, too, I feel that I should say that a very large part of the sketches of the dead, and of the living, in the work were prepared by me either from personal knowledge, from notes furnished, or from records, obituaries, sermons etc., published on the decease of the parties.

Though the work has a great many sketches, I sought by circular and letter appeal to get further and other sketches, since the story of one's life, telling how he lived and what he did is always of interest and should be preserved, but many of the people appealed to were too thoughtless or too modest to help me.

There are a few sketches, however, of the dead, and also of the living, that were prepared of the former by their descendants, and of the latter by themselves or close friends.

Reason Why Two Year Dates Given

All through the early years, as will be noticed, two year dates are often given of births, baptisms, dates of contracts, etc. This arose from the fact that down to the year 1754, the ecclesiastical year began March 25, while the civil year began on the first day of January. Thus many people being in doubt which was the correct year gave both, as 1654-5.

Other Pioneers—Confusion in Names

Added to the ordinary difficulties of a genealogical work going back over two and a half centuries, I quite often met great and perplexing problems of placing and determining Sanford data that I obtained, due very often to the fact that there were four other Pioneer Sanfords in the State of Connecticut as early as 1640 besides our Thomas, another in Rhode Island and Richard in Boston with at least three sons. The trouble was intensified also by the fact that four of the Connecticut Sanfords gave the same names to many of their children. (See article on Thomas.) It was surprising, however, to find so little data belonging to the other Pioneers. Nearly all the Sanfords I came across were descendants of Thomas, who, with his wife, must have been of good rich blood. That the descendants of Thomas Sanford were numerous and vigorous and patriotic as well, is clearly shown by the fact that of the thirty-nine Sanfords shown by "Connecticut Men in the Revolution" to have taken part in that struggle, twenty-nine of them were descendants of our Thomas Sanford.

Errors and Mistakes

Nor do I doubt that there are many errors and mistakes in the work, very likely a good many. I certainly have done my best to make it as accurate as I could, sparing not labor or expense in that effort. Not often, indeed seldom, would the same data from different sources agree as to dates and even names. Those finding minor errors or even important errors, I ask, under these circumstances and the difficulties of the situation, to be as considerate and generous as is possible. I have worked long upon it, faithfully, if not well, and I am greatly wearied by it.

I further ask all readers of the work who discover any errors to write me of them, and also to send me any new, further and additional family data that I have failed to secure, making it clear and plain where it should come in. If sufficient corrections and new data be sent to me to warrant it, I will print a supplementary pamphlet to be sent to the owners of the work, or preserve the same for a new edition of the genealogy.

After all I feel and believe that I have secured about all the family data that is fairly and reasonably obtainable, and made a grand base for a more perfected genealogy in the future by the Sanford Association organized in 1906 by Rev. E. T. Sanford of New York city, Rev. E. B. Sanford of New York city, and Rev. A. B. Sanford, of Long Island City, moved and induced thereto by my inauguration of this work. The Association has now held four annual conventions with flattering success. All Sanfords by blood or name should aid and attend these conventions when possible.

A Religious Family

The family I have found in over four years of study, has been quite devout and religious, furnishing many ministers of the Gospel all through the years to the present time. Thomas, the Pioneer, and his wife were members of the church. Among the Sanfords by name who obtained more or less prominence as ministers, I may name David (418), David (999), Joseph (1101), Hawley (1210), Aaron K. (2953), David L. (7225), Elias B. (8379), and of Sanford blood, Thomas F. Davies (3056).

A Patriotic Family

In patriotism and loyalty to the country the family takes high rank. As will be seen in scanning the work quite a large number were in the war of the Revolution, the War of 1812 and particularly in the Great Civil War. The names of all these soldiers, so far as I have been able to ascertain them, will be found in the rear part of the work, arranged in alphabetical order with their respective pages in the work.

Prominent Lawyers

There were and are, many in the family who gave and are, giving their attention to the law, some of whom gained considerable distinction, to wit:—

Jonathan R. (523), Judge David C. (2234), Lemuel (1200), Judge Patrick H. (5077), Judge Charles F. (5256), Judge Edward I. (5263), Judge Edward T. (7318) and Orville H. Platt (3283).

Successful Business Men

But it as business men that the family has shown the greatest capacity and achieved the greatest distinction. All the four sons of Thomas and he himself, proved themselves men of industry, frugality and good judgment. But it is in recent years that members of the family have shown great business capacity. Among these I will mention:—

Capt. Stephen (130), John (1416), Levi (1643), early manufacturer of the pitchfork, Thomas (1737), earliest manufacturer of matches, Benjamin F. (1947), John C. (2189), Henry J. (2190), Rollin (2197), Hervey (2252), Sewall (2347), Henry (2946), Glover (1113), Edward J. (3401), William E. (3406), Stephen (3412), Orman (3935), inventor of fish plate, Milton H. (5535), Edwards S. (5537), John (7341), Henry S. (3408), Jonah, Jr. (5063).

I will, I trust, be pardoned for not giving the names of others, that should be in the list of ministers, soldiers, lawyers and business men which I have failed to note.

Trials and Pleasures of the Work

The work though tedious, trying and taxing, has afforded me great pleasure as the picture unfolded, and as I, from time to time, secured information, which for months it seemed impossible to get. No one not having done such work has any idea of the patience, application and persistence required to prosecute such a task. But for the kindly words and generous help that I received when I began and as the work progressed, I fear I should have abandoned the undertaking. This sympathy and help with the attendant growth of the work from week to week and month to month stimulated and pushed me on. No one who has not "taken a hand" in such work, can be fully conscious of the pride that comes to one as his work grows, develops and fills up, as he every now and then steals from the darkness of the past, a name, or it may be a family fast sinking into historical oblivion. To do this fills one with the thought that he has done something, accomplished something, saved something.

And all this, too, with no thought of gain or even full reward other than an unknown and unlisped "Thank you" now and then, here and there about the country and especially in the years to come. Perhaps that is sufficient. It will have to suffice at any rate.

And with it all comes to me the conviction that it is a pretty good family. I have not come across a felon or any one imprisoned for crime. The work is filled, as those who scan its pages will observe with the names of grand and noble men and women, with many teachers, ministers, legislators, lawyers, judges, and successful business men, some of whom have attained distinguished prominence in their respective fields of labor.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF ASSISTANCE

I would like to express my thanks to all who have so kindly aided and assisted me, but it would take too great space. I must, however, express my obligations to some of those who have taken a deep interest in the work and aided me very much. Among those I would name, to wit:

Frank E. Sanford, Mrs. F. A. Sanford (See Andrew's family in Appendix), Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Daniels, Mrs. Sarah E. Lane, Charles E. P. Sanford, Rev. Arthur B. Sanford, Miss Alice I. Sanford, Miss Kate W. Fay, Mrs. Emma Brayton, Mrs. Charles Armstrong, George E. Baldwin, Mrs. Laura Smith, Mrs. Medora Todd, Mrs. Sarah E. Headley, Charles H. Woodruff, Ferdinand V. Sanford, Mrs. Frances Nelson, Mrs. Frank Powers, Charles M. Jarvis, Dr. Arthur F. Bissell, Miss Katherine W. Sanford, Rev. David A. Sanford, Howard S. Abbott, Leroy V. Sanford, Geo. W. Sanford, George Sanford, Mrs. Margaret S. Sanford, Frank M. Bassett, Herbert B. Sanford, Mrs. James Bull, David F. Sanford, D. Rowland Sanford, Riley C. Sanford, and A. D. Hodges, Jr., genealogist of Boston, for the free use of his two manuscript vols. of early data as to all Pioneer Sanfords.

Durable Paper Used in Work

The paper used in this work is manufactured by S. D. Warren & Co., of Boston, under the formula of the New England Historic Genealogical Society and bears its name as a water mark. Before such use of its name can be made the paper is first analyzed by the Society's expert chemist for deleterious ingredients. Its composition is seventy-five per cent. rag, twenty-five per cent. spruce sulphite and soda poplar for fibers, and free from acids and chlorides. The paper is more expensive than that used in most books, but its durability far outweighs this extra cost.

And now, with this prefatory story of the work, of the history of its preparation of its aims and purposes, with its trials and burdens, I feelingly and respectfully submit it to the kindly and considerate favor and judgment of the descendants of Thomas Sanford living and to those that shall appear in the years to come.

The Ancestral Origins of the Sanfords and the Origin of Thomas Sanford Who Came to America in 1632-4

BY

CHARLES A. HOPPIN

"Examine well your blood." (Shakespeare.)

We shall do so most seriously, Mr. Shakespere.

All the statements in print to the effect that a Sanford went across the English Channel from Normandy to England with William the Conqueror, in the year 1065, fought at "the Battle of Hastings" and became the founder and progenitor of the Sanford families first found, some generations later, in England, may be rejected as unproven and unlikely to be true; moreover, they are impossible of proof. The so-called "Roll of Battle Abbey," in which, it is asserted, appears the name of the genuine Sanford (the aforesaid compatriot of William the Duke of Normandy) has lost much of the importance and significance, under the searchlight of recent investigation by men of real authority in historical matters, that had been applied to it.

The Duchess of Cleveland in her work entitled, The Battle Abbey Roll (1889 V 111 p 108) states:

"The ancient Shropshire family of Sandford did not derive its name from Normandy. They, like so many others, adopted the name of their English manor. Other Sandfords there were, not included in the Shropshire pedigree, that may possibly have imported the name from Normandy.

This latter suggestion is reasonable enough; but as no evidence in support of it is obtainable, and as the surname of Sanford can be sufficiently accounted for without going out of England, there is no need for us to indulge in supposition. Sanford is a surname originating in England from an older place-name of Sandford or (and) Sampford. The place-name is a Saxon name; it was created long prior to the entree of the Normans into England, but not adopted as a surname until the latter part of the twelfth century. We are unwilling to believe that there was such a person as "Gen. Thomas de Sanford" living at the time of the Norman Conquest (1066) as the Sanford progenitor. We may well doubt that there was any person alive, at that time, of the true English surname of Sanford. We are not among the credulous who have thought that there was a Norman name of "Sontford" that was the same as Sanford.

On the other hand, granting that there was a man who then had a name similar to that of the later and purely English surname of Sandford, or Sanford, and who was present at some sort of a celebration, affair or meeting, probably held at what is now known as Battle Abbey (which affair was not held until years after the Norman Conquest of 1066) we are still without proper record evidence of that time, extant in the British archives, that— (1) any such man married, (2) had male issue, (3) issue that married and had issue, (4) issue that bore the surname of Sandford or Sanford, (5) that any such man remained in England, (6) or was a General, (7) or came from Normandy with William, Duke of Normandy, (8) or was present at the so-called Battle of Hastings in the year 1066, (9) or that did not, after the manner of many Normans, who had acquired property in England, assume another name altogether after the name of that property.

There were no English surnames then. Surnames had not become thoroughly established in England for an hundred years after 1065; in many distant parts (from London) it was long after 1165 before the adoption of surnames became general. The writer has oft noted in original manuscripts as late as 1370, references to men who had not then adopted a surname other than the Christian name of their fathers. J. H. Round (Studies in Peerage and Family History) well emphasizes the fact of the fallacy that the Sanford name came from Normandy or that any real Norman bearer of it founded the English Sanford families. He says:

"The Pedigree maker, I observe, in these later days has found a way of adapting Domesday Book for his purpose. Any family—they are countless in number— of which the name is derived from a locality mentioned in Domesday is now assumed to descend from a tenant who was then holding [land] there [in 1086]. * * * As this point is of some importance I may illustrate it further by the case of 'Sandford of Sandford.' Mr. Eyton (author of the Antiquities of Shropshire) who devoted much study to the early history of this ancient house, came to the conclusion that

Richard de Sandford, the first known representative of this line, occurs in 1167. No one could knew so much as Mr. Eyton on the subject, and yet Burke's Landed Gentry (and others that have copied Burke) make a genuine pedigree, from 1167, absurd by carrying back the family for three generations to the Conquest (1066) and asserting that:

'Thomas de Saundford, a Norman, held the manor under Gerard de Tournay, a powerful Baron, whose name is in the Domesday Book.'

This statement is sheer fiction. Sandford is entered in Domesday as held by 'Gerard' of the Earl; Domesday knows nothing of Thomas and still less of Thomas de Saundford.

The present writer has examined both the original Domesday Book of 1086-88 and its reproduction. The surname of Sanford in any known form, does not appear in this splendidly full record of the land owners and the principal tenants of both before and after the Norman conquest. A translation of the entire record of the place of Sandford in Shropshire, as given in the Domesday Book in 1086-88, reads:

"The same Gerard holds Sandford (of the Earl). Uluet held it [in Saxon times] and was free. Here are three hides [of land] geldable [taxable]. There is [arable] land [enough] for three ox teams. In demesne there are one team and a half-team; and there are 2 Serfs and 4 Villains with one team. Here is a wood which will fatten 30 swine; and Haye. In King Edward's time [in 1042-1066] the manor was worth 15 s [shillings per annum]; now it is worth 10 s. He [Gerard] found it waste."

Mr. Eyton shows that not only no Sanford held this manor then, but that later the owners were the daughter, Sibil, and the son-in-law of Gerard de Tournai, viz., Hamo Peverel, and that subsequently, by failure of lineal descendants of the latter, or of Gerard, the property escheated to the crown. The Sandfords were, says Eyton, "enfeoffed in this manor by the Crown probably temp Henry I." (1133). As to whether the Sandfords were of Saxon, Danish, Celtic, or Norman blood there is nothing to show except that their coat-of-arms suggests that they were either descendants from, or allied by marriage with the great house of Fitz Warin, a family of Norman descent which first came into notice temp Henry I. It is fully as likely that they had Norman blood in their veins as any other, but before their appearance at Sandford in Shropshire their name could hardly have been Sandford. They did not name this place, and they could not have had any such surname until after they had become well identified with the place of Sandford. There were several places of that name before the twelfth century, and not so named, after 1065, by the Normans. There is no reason at all to expect that these people had any surname that early, but were known, if they were British, as Richard son of Henry, or John son of William, or by other similar combinations of their own Christian name followed by the Christian name of their father, or if they were of Norman blood, then by some altogether different and entirely Norman designation. If the ancestors of the first-known Sandfords of 1167 (whatever were the other names they certainly bore, before, instead of that of Sandford) lived at this place in the eleventh century, then the foregoing record of the Domesday Book tells plainly that they were either one or both of these two serfs (small tenants having no political existence) or either of those four villains (slaves) who constituted the adult male population of Sandford in 1086-88. None of these serfs, or villains, could hardly have risen above their low station of servitude during the period of Norman rule—as any one who understands the social conditions of that time will know—because they were not Normans, but of the conquered natives of England reduced to servitude and bondage. Therefore, it is most likely correct, as Eyton observes, that the people who had enfeoffed in this manor of Sandford, perhaps as early as the reign of Henry I (1135), and who, after becoming so settled thereon and so seized of the same and assumed the place-name as their surname, were descendants of Normans, in whole or in part, or else had sufficient influence, possibly through the Fitz Warins (Fitz is Norman for son of) to get this property at or shortly before 1167, for at this period the Norman power still controlled the land of England. The title to all of the land was vested in the King and held (leased to others) in capite (of the king).

The year 1167 is sufficiently early for the first adoption, by any man, of the place-name of Sandford as his surname. Mr. Round is a genealogical student of the "new school," the scientific school. His observations in the many pedigree cases that he has skilfully treated are based upon actual record-evidence and not upon tradition. Traditions 800 years old, if any such exist (and it is practically impossible for a creditable tradition to survive for anywhere near so long a time), are but dreams and vagaries. Mr. Round and other have fairly shown that many of these old myths were invented by the pedigree-makers of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. To conjure up some connection with the Conquest of England was then quite a fad. Nobody seemed to care enough about it then to question it. Any Sanford who cares to read "the famous article" by the late Prof. Freeman of Oxford University (perhaps the highest authority upon the history of England in the Norman period), entitled, "Pedigrees and Pedigree-Makers" (Contemporary Review XXX. 11--41) in which this author demolishes some of the fables published in that "gorgeous repertory of genealogical mythology," i. e., the well-known "Peerage" of Sir Bernard Burke, Ulster King-of-Arms, will not feel disappointed at now parting forever with the titled Norman ancestors who for so long headed the pedigree of the Sandfords of Shropshire, in the several editions by Burke. Prof. Freeman proclaimed:

"I turn over a peerage, or other book of genealogy, and I find that, when a pedigree professes to be traced back to the time of which I know most in detail (eleventh and twelfth centuries) it is all but invariably false. As a rule, it is not only false, but impossible."

A Bishop of Oxford dryly remarked, "It would seem that everybody whose ancestry did not go away in the Mayflower, must have come over with the Conqueror's ships."

Guiding ourselves by these facts, foregoing, we must consider that the only references in print as to the early Sanfords in England, that are worthy of our credence, are those contained in Eyton's Antiquities of Shropshire. This standard work absolutely exhausts the archives of England upon the early Sandfords of that shire. Therein, this particular Sandford pedigree begins, not in 1065, but in 1167. This takes the name away back to the days when surnames originated in England--farther back even than the majority of families can be traced. This pedigree, that Eyton gives, is that of the Shropshire Sandfords only. There were other Sandfords almost as early, but not earlier; all of them were of English origin as to their surname. We shall not assume that we are descendants of any of the Shropshire Sandfords. This line of Sandfords has been prominent, and this family bears a coat-of-arms. American Sanfords long ago seized upon this more noted line and assumed that, as a matter of course, they were descendants from it. They also made some claim to the coat-of-arms. That is the common error into which the inexperienced querists allow themselves to fall. Their assumption is not only unwarranted but most unlikely to be true, in any way, at any time.

The truth is that our surname of Sanford originated in England many years after the Norman Conquest; also, that there are seven places in England called Sanford, or Sandford, and three places called (chiefly) Sampford or Samford. From one, and very likely from several of these places different men, in the twelfth or thirteenth century, assumed that name as their surname. As to the place-name of Sampford, the three such places are in Somerset, Devon and Essex. The authorities upon etymology—Lower and Bardsley—assure us that this topographical name became the surname of a family of Sampford or Sanford. There are various early examples of this surname.

We shall show beyond the possibility of a doubt, that our emigrant ancestor, Thomas Sanford, was not of that Shropshire family. We can have nothing to do with the coat-of-arms of these Shropshire people; and our true line of ancestry does not figure at all in the records of the College of Arms, as to any armorial bearings whatever, for the two shires in which that line resided. Therefore, casting aside all the various claims that have been made, all without a particle of proof, in the past thirty years, as to the English home and parentage of Thomas Sanford, and after a sufficient waste of time and money in investigating them, we have entered upon an impartial original examination of actual records, in England, in an attempt to determine, with precision and by proof, the parentage of our emigrant ancestor. (The writer has made this search in England.) The attempt has been successful, also somewhat costly. We have found out who Thomas Sanford was, and we have found out where he came from. The evidence is conclusive. It sets at naught all the various claims hitherto made and based upon misconception.

A Henry Sanford, of unknown lineage, was made Bishop of Rochester in Kent in 1227. He died in 1235 without issue (Banks). Another early Sanford who died without male issue was "the Thomas Sanford" who, says Banks, "was one of those who 24 Edward I had summons to attend at Newcastle upon Tyne, well furnished with horse and arms for an expedition into Scotland, and to obey such orders and directions, as by the Great Council which was commanded then to assemble might be ordained. He probably is the same who died 27 Edward I leaving Alva, his sister, heir to his lands in Chester and Devon."

There is a place called Sampford in the County of Essex; the name has been also written Samford and Sanford. "Samford," "Sanford" and "Sampford" are hopelessly intermingled and mixed up in Essex as surnames, one for the other, owing to imperfection in the spelling, caused by the record keepers. There have been Sampfords and Samfords and Sandfords and Sanfords in Essex for hundreds of years. Many, if not all of them, undoubtedly, derived their name between the years 1150 and 1300 from the place of similar name in the same shire, viz., Sampford (also called Sanford) in the Hundred of Freshwell, County of Essex, near Braintree, and four miles northeast from Thaxted and situated on the Freshwell or Pant stream. To this origin, in Essex, we may look more hopefully than to any other, in considering to which source ran the blood of Thomas Sanford, the emigrant to New England of 1634.

There were Samfords in Cambridgeshire in 1272. There were Sandfords in Yorkshire almost as early. There were Sandfords in many places before 1400. There were certainly three, if not four or five, or even six or seven separate and distinct families, all bearing some form of the surname of Sandford, or Sampford, in England before 1400, and none of the number in any way related to any one of the others. Why so? Simply and most naturally so because the place-name of Sanford meant a sandy ford across a stream—the Freshwell or Pant stream, aforesaid, in Essex for one instance. There were many such fords in England, and at some of these fords settlements developed. These places were named by the Saxons after the topographical situation or characteristic; and some man or men living at each or several of such places, when surnames came into vogue in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries adopted the place-name where they so resided as a surname. Likewise there were hundreds of blacksmiths, millers, and other tradesmen unrelated, who, when surnames came into fashion in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, became known by the surnames of Smith, Miller or other, after their trades. The millions of Smiths, Millers, etc., since that time are, consequently, made up of many distinct and unrelated family-bloods, so to speak.

So far as our Thomas Sanford's ancestry is concerned, our surname is as likely derived from Sampford in Essex as from Sandford in Oxfordshire. Were it not that the place-name of Sampford in Essex was near enough to our later ancestral home along the Essex-Hertfordshire border, to influence record-keepers into writing our name "Sampford" instead of some other way, we should more quickly tie up fast to the belief that our blood was first indicated by the surname of Sampford. The only solution of this problem lies in tracing back the pedigree of our earliest known ancestor in Hertfordshire or Essex, from 1500 to 1200. This would give us the true, original spelling of our name. To accomplish that task, however, is almost impossible, as we now behold it. The contiguity of Sampford town in Essex to Hertfordshire, and the certainty that there were genuine Sampfords roundabout in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, are good arguments that Sanford, Sandford and Samford, as surnames, are variants—so far as this part of England is concerned—of the ancient and present surname of Sampford. Further hereon, for the present, we shall leave the records to make their own impression and conviction.

We have not attempted to run down all the numerous references to Sanfords in England, between 1167 and 1500, in order to specify to which of the several distinct and unrelated lines of Sanfords each and every such scattering item belongs. That is a work beyond our immediate need and purpose, and, as well, a work requiring the financial co-operation therein of the Sanford descendants in America, in general. Before such a work could be thought of, we needed to know where was the home and who were the parents of our emigrant ancestor, Thomas Sanford. Hence we have confined our search, somewhat, to these matters of chief importance. It may be said, by the way, that the difficulties and expense of that work alone have been sufficient for the share of any one Sanford descendant to assume, of his own volition. There is but slight hope, at present, of the possibility of perfecting the ancestry of Thomas Sanford further back than we have discovered and developed it. We may, therefore, properly set aside for some possible future consideration the question as to which one of the early lines of Sanfords, heretofore mentioned, our ancestors derived from between 1150 and 1400. We find that our direct ancestors in England lived on both sides of the line where the counties of Hertford and Essex join, as far back as we have been enabled, by circumstances, to trace them. It seems far more likely that our Essex-Hertfordshire Sanfords derived, before 1500, from the nearby Sampfords or Samfords of Essex rather than from the Sandfords who were in Oxfordshire in 1273, or the Sandfords of the distant county of Salop (Shropshire) upon the border of Wales, or from the more distant Devonshire. It is also equally likely that the Sandfords of Essex, portrayed partly in the Visitations of Essex, by the heralds of the College of Arms, had an origin separate from the Shropshire family, though at no point so far visible after 1500 do our Hertford-Essex Sanfords come into touch with their neighbors, the heraldic Sandfords of Essex. These latter Sandfords may be of Essex entirely, and their name may be one of the variants of the place-name of Sampford in Essex, and so make the Sampfords or Samfords, and the Sanfords or Sandfords, of Essex and Hertford of one blood. This is entirely natural and it looks good to the professional observer. As much as one may wish to incline toward keeping the two names of Sampford and Sanford apart, the records prevent that separation, as will be demonstrated shortly. The suggestions that have been made (without any evidence in support thereof) that the emigrant, Thomas Sanford, directly derived from the heraldic Sandfords, portrayed in the Visitation of Essex, is disproved by documents that we now have great pleasure in presenting. If his ancestors before 1500 came from the Essex line, it was then too early to make it possible for us to claim any right to bear the coat-of-arms which is, by the said Visitation of Essex, confined to those Sanfords of Essex of the seventeenth century whose names appear in that Visitation.

As before stated, our known Sanfords of Hertfordshire and Essex do not figure in any way, in any records in connection with any coat-of-arms. That fact is not to their discredit. Perhaps it is not generally realized, in America, that a coat-of-arms rightfully belongs solely to the descendants of the one man to whom it was granted. For example: The brothers of that one man, to whom a coat-of-arms has been granted, have no legal right to use their brother's arms; nor have their descendants any right thereto, unless the one man to whom the arms were granted, dies without issue and makes one or more of his brothers his heir, or heirs, to inherit his property, his title, his coat-of-arms, etc. The sons of such an heir would, as a matter of custom, perpetuate the arms of their childless deceased uncle. Our Essex-Hertfordshire Sanfords were simple country people—small tradesmen and farmers. That is a great truth! Had they been otherwise, Thomas Sanford might have known but little of America and would have cared less, and much less ever have set foot upon its dry shores, or been cheered by its sparkling skies. These, our Sanfords, may have been entitled, in some roundabout way, to use a coat-of-arms. Some families drifted apart; inheritances were lost; and so some members of some families are probably entitled to coat-armor without knowing of that fact; and then, Puritanism did not set great store upon heraldic honors. But, nevertheless, as this matter now lays before us, and in default of any evidence showing that

Thomas Sanford, or his known ancestors, either had or used arms, it is deemed unsafe and entirely inadvisable for any of his descendants now to assume anything in connection with any coat-of-arms of any Sanford, or Sandford, or Samford, or Sampford of England. As a curiosity, or souvenir, the bearing of the heraldic Sandfords of Essex may be exhibited in America, but it should not be used, or claimed, as having any known relation to the ancestors of Thomas Sanford, the emigrant. Had he possessed any knowledge of his right to such arms it would have been his duty, and no doubt his pleasure, to have upheld therewith in America such an emblem of proof of the pride and station of his family as "gentlemen," according to the old English understanding of that word.

Briefly and "to the point," we now set forth all the obtainable evidence bearing directly upon our Thomas Sanford. Every extant record for this vital period has been found and examined. Many records are lost—to our great loss. That which remains is sufficient.

Hertford (pronounced Hartford, and sometimes Harford) is one of the eastern inland counties of England, separated from London by the counties of Middlesex and Essex which adjoin it upon the south and east. The county has about two hundred and sixty thousand inhabitants; in 1600, scarcely more than sixty thousand were settled within its 632 square miles. While hilly in the northern part, the land is mostly rather low and slightly rolling, presenting beautiful fields and streams and many market-gardens. Herts, as it is called in England, is still chiefly agricultural, and probably, the centre of the malt trade of England. Of the one hundred and eighty-four principal "seats" of the gentry of this county, none have been or are in the possession of Sanfords. The county of Essex, in which we shall also visit three Sanford towns, situated along the western border, separates Hertfordshire from the North Sea. Essex falls gradually eastward from its western side, being mostly quite flat, rich in both agriculture and manufactures, thickly covered with villages, many quaint and interesting, and some unpleasing. There may be references to Sanfords in Herts before 1500; if so, they are not apparent or easily found. As said, we have been concerned chiefly with the records after that date. The earliest mention that we have noticed of a Sanford in the original manuscript records of this shire, is that found in a fine of the year 1513. A fine is the final concord, the final agreement between all parties concerned —an abstract of a deed of sale of real estate, or other property, which abstract was reported to the crown, by demand of the law. For a preliminary to every such sale, a license to alienate had to be obtained and paid for. The process of alienation was by suit in court. The buyer, called the querent, sued for the property: the seller, called the deforciant, did not defend the suit; the title passed accordingly.

These records are in Latin:

(Public Record Office, London.)

Feet of Fines. Trinity Term, 5th Henry VIII. (1513).

Thomas Willughby, Esq., Edward Wotton, Esq., Robert Smyth, Chaplain and John Goodmond, Junr., querents, versus Nicholas Sandeford and Margery, his wife, deforciants, whereby the latter transfer to the former their moiety in three messuages (houses) and lands in the town and parish of Watford.

We do not connect this Nicholas Sandeford with other Sanfords of later record nearby. So far as we are concerned with Hertfordshire, our people begin and end in one parish— that of Great or Much Hadham, some thirty miles northeast of Watford.

The great grandfather of Thomas Sanford, the emigrant to New England of 1634, was Richard Sanford, whose wife was Elizabeth, as will be proven shortly. There was another Richard Sanford closely related to the first named Richard. He was likely a cousin. This apparent cousin resided in Great Hadham, where he died, seemingly without issue. We will dispose of him first. He figures in the Subsidy Roll for 1545. This record is the list of the taxable inhabitants who were to pay a tax to the crown, in the general national taxation of that year. The record reads:

(Public Record Office, London.)

Lay Subsidy, Hundred of Edwinstree, Hertfordshire, 1545.

"Hadham Magna

Pro anticipacione. Rich. Sanfford, g." (no amount given)

The letter "g" indicates that he was to pay an unnamed sum upon his goods, by which is understood that he was a merchant engaged in some trade solely, or in addition to farming, possibly that of a glover. The Sanfords who appear after him, in Great Hadham, were glovers. The will mentions no Sanford relatives; it does refer to real estate this first Richard Sanford owned in Hatfield (Broad Oak), a parish a few miles to the eastward and within the boundary of the adjoining county of Essex, where we shall soon see the father of our Thomas Sanford, the emigrant, was married. The will also shows that the testator's father (Christian name unknown) had lived in Great Hadham. This indicates the presence of Sanfords in the parish as early as 1500.

The burial of this first Richard Sanford is not recorded in the records of the parish church of Much Hadham. That he was buried in the churchyard there, as the will directs, cannot be doubted, for he died within a few days after his will was written. The vital records of this parish commence in 1559, the year before this man died, though they are incomplete, in places, as will be seen hereinafter.

Now the other Richard Sanford, to whom we have referred as being the great-grandfather of the emigrant Thomas Sanford, lived in the parish of Stanstead Mountfitchet, in Essex, five miles to the northeast from Great Hadham, and just over the line dividing the counties of Hertford and Essex. Here, in this border town, he died in the year 1591, as is shown by this now-extant record of burial in the register of the old parish church of Stanstead Mountfitchet:

"Burialls 1591. Olde Samford buryed 16 of Novem."

This Richard Sanford's wife was named Elizabeth, as their son's will proves; it names them both specifically. She was buried, according to the register of Stanstead Mountfitchet:

"Beured Wedow Samford XV of September 1600."

Their son's name was Thomas. He was undoubtedly born in Stanstead Mountfitchet shortly prior to the year 1558. His birth is not recorded in the register of the old church of this parish because the earliest book of such records, now preserved, begins in 1558. This son, Thomas Sanford, however, married in his home parish shortly after he was of age, as the church register there affirms in these words:

"Thomas Samford and ffriswit Eve were married the XXIth of September 1581."

In the will of the first Richard Sanford of Great Hadham, 1560, we have noted that there was bequeathed "to Robart Eve a tenement in Hatfelde," where, by the way, we shall soon have to go to follow the movements of the father of the emigrant to America.

Sixty-four days after Thomas Sanford married (as above), he laid his wife, Friswith, in a grave in the noble yard of that same church of Stanstead Mountfitchet. The record in the parish register of this untimely sorrow, as written at the time of the burial, reads:

"ffryswth Sampford the wife of Thomas Sampford was buryed the 24th of November 1581."

Afterwards for solace, or relief, Thomas Sanford sought another scene. Leaving father and mother he went away the five miles to Great Hadham, in nearby Herts, an even quainter place than he left. Somewhere in or not far from Great Hadham he married again, within three years, to a Mary, whose maiden name is not specifically recorded, though she was likely a "Lewes" or a "Mellett", since Thomas Sanford calls John Lewes and John Mellett of Great Hadham brothers-in-law. The marriage record is not entered at Great Hadham, nor in the adjacent parishes. Perchance, she was of Great Hadham and the recording of the marriage was, like the recording of many other similar events, in this particular parish, forgotten by the rector of the church. The "sins of omission" of this clergyman, with respect to his duties to keep the records of his parish, are plainly far too many for the forgiveness of the genealogist, since such neglect is unusual. When Thomas Sanford arrived in this reposeful, dignified little town he was evidently the only Sanford there. However, he soon attended to that insufficiency. This Thomas Sanford of Great Hadham was the grandfather, and Mary Lewes or Mellett was the grandmother of the emigrant to New England, Thomas Sanford. The grandfather names five children in his will; the baptisms of four of them are recorded in the register of the parish church of Great Hadham, where all attended—always as loyal supporters of the Established Church of England. They were free of all taint of dissent and nonconformity. The unrecorded baptism is that of the daughter Damaris. The book containing these written records is the old official register, in which were set down the baptisms, marriages and burials. The entries of the earlier years were well written in the Elizabethan courthand, an even, formal style now long since obsolete. The ink has faded but slightly these three-hundred and fifty years. While an American Sanford would have difficulty in reading these records, for their first hundred years, every entry is plain reading to the palaeographer. The rector cheerfully removed the register from the strong box of iron, permitting the writer to peruse it entire with the following result:

The entries begin in 1559. Practically all of the baptisms, marriages and burials were entered, in the order of the occurrence, until the 25 Feb. 1592. From this date to Dec. 17, 1598, practically all of the baptisms in this parish were not recorded. Fortunately, this neglect costs us only one baptism,—that of Damaris Sanford. The careless rector, however, did set down in the book the baptisms of five of his own children and of three others. He continued the omissions, largely, until April 1601, having set down only forty-one baptisms between Dec. 17, 1598, and April, 1601. Also all baptisms were omitted from the record for November, December and January 1602-3. Fully one hundred births are thus missing for the blank period. The burial records are substantially complete from Oct. 1559 to August 1599; but no entries were made from the latter date to July 1601. There is also a blank space in the list of burials from January to September 1625. The records of marriage seem to be fairly complete and consecutive from 1559, but occasional omissions are to be expected. The man responsible for this indifference to the welfare of the community, was "Theophilus Ailmer, Doctor in Divinity, Rector of Much Hadham" whose burial here is recorded on 11 Jan. 1625. Having been the son of John Ailmer, Bishop of London, lord of the manor of Much Hadham, and enjoying a very large salary, with almost unlimited power in Much Hadham, this "lord spiritual" felt free to study his own comfort and pleasure. As late as 1870, the salary attaching to this parish church was over $10,000 a year, with the use of a fine house and 279 acres of land additional. The salary is now reduced to about $3,000. The town's population has never been over 1300; so the "living" of this parish is still one of the plums that bishops can bestow upon a favorite. The average income of the incumbents of the parish livings of Hertfordshire is but £370 a year.

The records of four of the five children of Thomas and Mary Sanford were entered as follows:

Baptisms—

"1586 ffebruary 20, Ezechiell sonn of Thomas Sandford."
"1588 March 17, Priscilla, daughter of Thomas Sandforth."
"1590 August 9, Zachary, sonn of Thomas Sandford."
"1592 September 24, Sara, daughter of Thomas Sandford."

Of these children, Priscilla married in Much Hadham as this entry in the same register attests:

"Marriages September 30, 1609—Thomas Howe & Priscilla Sanford."

Of Ezechiel, there will be much to tell shortly.

Of Sara, she was married by 1615, to a Howe.

Of Zachary, his life was most uneventful. He was the only son who continued in Much Hadham. As he is not named in any of the Lay Subsidies (tax rolls of parliamentary taxation), it is judged that he owned no land, was not a merchant, but passed his days in the employ of some citizen of the town. Out of all the various classes of records applying to this locality, that have been searched, but four more references occur to him in all his long life. We may not charge him with lack of ambition, but rather with want of opportunities. Fatherless at the age of seven, a younger son, he inherited nothing and was doubtless brought up by his father-in-law. His sequestered life was only typical of that of many thousands of his sturdy, immovable, unquestioning, satisfied countrymen, who became fixed in the positions, customs and ideas that circumstances and nature seemed to have found for them. Zachary Sanford married, though the record thereof is among the items missing from the official records of this parish and its vicinity. No children are recorded to him; it is probable he did not become a father. After the day of his baptism, for seventy-four years, save the mention in his father's will of 1597, the record-keepers had nothing to record concerning him, that has been left for us to find. This reference exists in the register of his parish church:

"1661. Dec. 21st late wife of Zacharia Sandford was buried."

The court of the lord of the manor must have required his services, or evidence, often enough, but these records are all lost between 1586 and 1662, though this fact is not the usual condition elsewhere. In 1663 he was chosen on the jury. The record reads:

(Public Record Office, London.)

Manuscripts of the Ecclesiastical Commission. (Lords of the Manor of Much Hadham). Roll Number 206—6.

"View of frank pledge in the Court Baron of the Reverend Father in God, Gilbert, by divine permission Bishop of London, 28 October, 1663."

"Zachariah Samford, juror."

(Jurors were chosen from tenants on the manor.)

The earthly end of Zachary Sanford is pictured in the same church book that bears the record of his baptism (birth). He sleeps beside his father, on the sunny side of the church, the only son there buried. His age at death was eighty seven years and five months, to a day, he having outlived all Sanfords of his generation:

"1677(8) Jan. 9th Zacary Sampford an old man was buried." (From the parish register of Much Hadham.)

No memorial of stone, wood or metal marks his grave, nor the graves of any Sanford in this sleepy churchyard. This "God's Acre" is almost cloistered, shrouded by the thickly clustered branches of great trees. The disappearance of the Sanford gravestones is merely in accord with the custom of the church authorities, all over England. Gravestones are seldom long left standing. Additional interments are made upon the older interments, and newer stones are erected in place of the former ones. The average country churchyard is about an acre in size. The landlords generally manage to be buried inside of the churches, and to have their memorials preserved upon the inner walls or in the floor. So the outsiders are forgotten; and those who may care about it, and who grieve over such "a state of things" can't help the matter.

Damaris Sanford, sister of Zachary, and youngest child of Thomas and Mary Sanford, died unmarried when about twenty-two or twenty-three years old, shortly before her mother. Her burial was not recorded at Much Hadham. She made a will, however, implying that she was of that parish; so, probably, she was buried there. Her mother is mentioned in this will as "Mary Hadesly," having married again after the death of her first husband, Thomas Sanford. Damaris may have lived with her stepfather till her death in November 1615:

Commissary Court of London, Essex and Herts. [Filed will.]

Memorand that Damaris Sandford late of the pishe of Much Hadham, deceased, in the time of her last sickness whereof she died beinge about November last past, beinge of pfect minde and memory with an intent to dispose of her goods & to make a will, nuncupative, used these words following or the like in effect vizt. I geve unto Priscilla Howe and Mary Howe the children of my sister Priscilla Howe five poundes apiece, and all the rest of my goods I geve to my Sister Sara.

In the presence of Mary Hadesly and Thomas Gynn, the said Sara Howe with others.

Probated 13 March 1615-16.

The fact that this young English woman had money to bequeath, is evidence that she had earned it or saved it out of the legacy left to her by her father, to be paid to her when she attained the age of twenty years.

Much Hadham was a local center for the trade in fine skins, and Thomas Sanford, the father of Ezechiell and the four other children, was a glover. His product was sold both within and without the town. He may well have sent gloves to London since there were various dealings with London from Much Hadham, owing to the manor being the property of the Bishop of London, who maintained a palace in the town and came here frequently with a large retinue of servants, accompanied and followed by members of the gentry. These latter found the vale, in which the village lies, most sweet and sylvan, as it still is. A bishop of London then was well-nigh as powerful as a duke. The long village street was oft the path for the feet and equipages of some of the high and mighty.

Thomas Sanford neither sued nor was sued in the law courts of chancery. His name does not appear in the records of the sale of real estate. He was not lax in his duty to the church. No religious enthusiasm, or new ideas, led him to break the laws of his country by failing to attend the services in the church of Much Hadham.

Nor does his name appear in the records of criminal procedure. We shall show that he was a careful, exacting, conscientious man, exceedingly self-reliant. Soon after he came to Much Hadham from Stanstead Mountfitchet, and in the year that his first child was born, this serious-minded man had won the confidence of the community. The lord of the manor voiced respect for Thomas Sanford by summoning him to the manorial court, which chose him as one of the two guardians of the peace of the town. The evidence of this fact appears in a court roll of 1585, viz:

(Public Record Office, London.)

Manuscripts of the Ecclesiastical Commission. No. 206—3.

[Translation from the Latin.] "View of frank pledge in the Court of the Reverend father John [Ailmer], by divine permission, Bishop of London, held 19 March in the reign of Elizabeth by grace of God of England, ffrance & Ireland Queen, defender of the faith, etc. XXVII."

[27th year—1585.]

[Membrane 6 Great Hadham.]

"Philip Mills and Thomas Sandford chosen constables for the year."

Doubtless he served in the years following and also in other capacities in this court and in the town. The court rolls of this manor are lost from 1586 to 1662.

Thomas Sanford was a young tradesman. He inherited a bit of land from his father, in 1591, over east in Stanstead Mountfitchet. This property his mother lived upon until her death in 1600. Yet Thomas Sanford was surely a man of unusual carefulness and sagacity. The remarkable thing about him is his will, written about the fortieth year of his age and within a week before his untimely death. What foresight it reveals for a young man! In reading this testament we almost hear his words, so emphatic, clear and specific are their intent, so fraught with love for his children. He had but little to leave. He had but just begun his life's work; yet in disposing of that little he was most scrupulous to make the little do the uttermost possible for the good of those whom he loved, yet was so soon to leave fatherless. Conscientiousness is in every sentence. He felt to the full his responsibility. He was the master of his own house. The reader of this document will note the earnest efforts of a dying man, a man who wanted to live to fulfill his obligations as a parent, and his duty to the world and to posterity, and yet, so strong was his mind that he could leave no detail for the development of another person. Among thousands of wills of this same time and country, that the writer has perused, few are remembered as giving so striking a reflection of earnestness in the character of the testator. It is plain that the well-thought-out provisions for developments and emergencies were not the suggestions of a lawyer; they were the fruits of the hard, common-sense, the penetrating conception of a tradesman of much natural sagacity,—a farmer, who knew the Bible, believed it and had practiced its precepts. Here follows a verbatim copy of the will of Thomas Sanford, the grandfather of Thomas, Andrew, Robert and John Sanford, all being emigrants to New England, save John:

"Commissary Court of London, Essex and Hertford. (filed will.)

The signature of the testator is written in a very shaky, rambling hand, almost illegible. A rat has nibbled several parts of this will, but without causing serious damage.

CHURCHYARD, MUCH HADHAM

Showing south porch near which Thomas Sanford was buried in 1597

1634133

Thomas Sanford, the testator, died six years after his father Richard, and three years before his mother, Elizabeth. The custom was to bury people in the parish where they died, so Thomas was not laid beside his parents in Stanstead Mountfitchet. The record of his burial is presented to us in the register of the parish church of Much Hadham, where he, perhaps, may have sometime listened to a sermon by the Bishop of London, John Ailmer, though sermons were not often preached in English country churches in his time.

"Buryalls."

"1597 April 6, Thomas Sandforth, Glover."

Circumstances, doubtless, hastened the re-marriage of his widow Mary. She married a neighbor, as the parish register shows:

Marriages. Eliz. 39

"1597. August 9 John Haddesley & Mary Sandford, widdow late wyfe of Thomas Sandford."

All the children, save the eldest son, Ezechiel and Damaris who died, probably lived in or near Much Hadham, until the time of their mother's death. The register has this entry:

"Buryalls".

"1620 Aug. 19. Mary Hadsley wife of John Hadsley."

Ezechiel Sanford had left the town fully ten years before his mother's death. We shall follow him faithfully and tell much about him. There is much to tell, however, about Much Hadham. It is quite an interesting place. Let us ramble through its quiet streets, ere we follow the footsteps eastward of Ezechiel. With Ezechiel's departure (he was the father of our emigrant ancestor, Thomas Sanford) our ancestors (save Ezechiel's mother) were done with Much Hadham forever.

One long street, slightly winding, of about a mile in length holds, upon either side, the most of the dwellings of the town. A cross-road or two besides and that is all in the way of thoroughfares. Many house-fronts have been rebuilt facing the street, but the rear portions of most of them show ancient features. Some houses are quite the same as when Ezekiel Sanford lived there. These are thatched. Thomas, his father, the glover, must have resided in the main street; in which house can scarcely be learned now, as he did not own either house or land here, otherwise we should have found a record of his purchase or sale thereof. The Sanford visitor, nowadays, will be quite satisfied to select one or more of the quaint houses, and to stand before it and say with pleasure: "He may have lived in this one." If not that one, surely one much like it; artistically, that will be near enough for the visitor. Much Hadham is well worth such a visit. The inn is ordinary, though old, the meadows pleasing, the walk from the railway equally so, while the life of the old town is sedate, as of yore, though less ceremonious than when the bishop and his train summered here. An aristocratic air is lent by the several old seats of country gentlemen, and some good specimens of English farmers will be seen. The hovels of the poor, that so sorrowfully tell their tales of misery in so many villages of England, seem to be missing here. Hadham faces the keen-eyed visitor contentedly. It is called Great or Much Hadham to identify it from the nearby village of Little Hadham. The name Hadham is probably formed of Hadda and Ham, signifying the village or home of Hadda, a landlord who lived here in the Saxon period (years 500 to 1060). The old palace of the Bishops of London stands beside the church, remodeled somewhat, and still a nice residence. Like most of the residences of the gentry, and like the lives of the occupants thereof, it is secluded. Through its portals, seldom if ever, have passed the unpretentious cottagers of the village.

Cussan's History of Hertfordshire states that:

"It was here, in the Bishop's palace, that Edmund of Hadham, father of Henry VII was born. Edmund's mother was Catherine of France, widow of Henry V., and was married shortly after his death to Owen ap Meredyth ap Tudyr, commonly called Owen Tudor, by whom she had three sons, of whom Edmund was the eldest. Edmund of Hadham, created Earl of Richmond in 1452, married Margaret, only daughter and eventual heiress of John Beaufort, Duke of Somerset, and granddaughter of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster."

Hadham has not grown very much since 1086. The bishops still have jurisdiction of holding the manor court within the lordship. The fines upon the admission of any copyholder (lease holder) to a house are one year's quit rent, and there is a custom that "the widow of every copyholder who shall die seised of a copyhold estate in fee shall have her free-bench in all such estate whereof her husband died seised."

The parish church is the center of interest for the visitor. For six hundred years the people of the town have entered within and now lie without the walls of this present structure. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew; (there was an earlier building) it was erected about the year 1300. The south porch and tower were probably built about the year 1400, by Robert de Braybrook, who was Bishop of London from 1381 to 1404. The coat-of-arms of the bishop are roughly carved over the western doorway. The interior is lofty and well proportioned, though there are but few architectural features which call for special notice. The most curious point is that several of the capitals of the columns which support the clerestory are of different heights. The roofing is of open timber, and the pendant posts in the nave are supported on eight curiously carved corbels. Four of these bear the symbols of the Evangelists, and the others seem to represent scenes in the life of David.

The oldest memorial in the church is a slab to Simon Flambard, who was rector of this church in 1331. In the center of this slab is a floriated cross, with a long and very slender stem, the foot resting upon a lion. There is a fine memorial in the chancel to Judith Aylmer, widow of Bishop Aylmer, dated 1618. Some of the Washingtons, related to the ancestors of George Washington, lived here for a time and are mentioned in the register of the church.

In 1649, all the property in Hadham owned by the Bishop was confiscated by the Cromwellian government and sold for the benefit of the Commonwealth. At the restoration of the king in 1660, the property was restored to the bishop.

Bishop Aylmer put his son into this rectory in 1589. This Theophilus Ailmer read the burial service over the remains of Thomas Sanford in 1597; also baptised and married some of his children. Peter Hausted was rector after 1620. In the commonwealth period (1649-1660) Thomas Pasche was deposed when the living was sequestered by the government and the Puritan, Humphrey Hardwick, obtained it in 1643. Pasche was restored later. Thus the non-conformists had their way here for a time, but not when the Sanfords lived here. The fact that the bishop owned the manor, tended to prevent non-conformity from becoming so rampant as in other parts not far away.

The registers of the church show that many babies and children died here in the "Spital." "It would seem," remarks Cussan, "that the system of farming babies was extensively practiced in this parish three hundred years ago. * * * Perhaps it was on account of the salubrity of Hadham that children were brought here, and it is probable that, for the same reason, so many strangers came here from London to avoid the plague. The infection that they fled from they brought with them, for in less than five months, in 1603, no fewer than thirty entries of deaths marked plague are recorded. The great visitation sixty years later was more fatal. Illustrative of the eagerness with which all classes of people fled from the infected city, may be cited in the following entry:

"A pore London prentis fleeing from the plague was stricken by the roadside and there dyed." Again:

"A nurse child of London being a woman child was buried at night of the small-pox."

Alexander Nowell, who was rector here from 1562 to 1589, and who baptised Ezechiel Sanford, was the author of Christianae Pietatis, in 1570, a work that a contemporary author called "a hammer, a hatchet, a sword, an axe, to beat, to cut down, to wound, to destroy, Anti-Christ and all hereticks." With such a pastor there was little chance for Ezechiel's father Thomas, to be disloyal to the church. We strongly doubt that he was a dissenter at all, or that he looked upon the dissenters with other than disfavor or regret—if there were any dissenters in this the bishop's own parish. Nowell was the author of the first part of the Church Catechism in the Book of Common Prayer. His biographer, Rev Ralph Churton (1809) credits him with having been "an enthusiastic fisherman and the inventor of bottled beer." So, between his intensely human sporting proclivities and his religious vehemence, he doubtless entirely won and held his flock to his own way of thinking.

Ezekiel Sanford! What of him? We have proved that he was baptized at Much Hadham, Herts., 20 Feb. 1585-6 as the eldest son of Thomas and Mary Sanford. It now becomes a great pleasure to prove that he was the father of Thomas, Andrew and Robert Sanford, the three brothers who emigrated to New England. Zachary Sanford, who appeared in America in close connection with the other three, also was possibly his son; but as Zachary is not mentioned in the probate and parish records, as are the others, it remains partly an open question as to whether he was a son of Ezekiel or of the latter's brother Zachary. This elder Zachary, as has been seen, died in Much Hadham in 1677, a very old man. Zachary, the emigrant, was probably a son of Ezekiel or Zachary.

In America, Thomas, Andrew and Robert Sanford, each had a son whom they named Ezekiel, so named after their father. Zachary also named a son Ezekiel. All three men also named daughters Mary after both their maternal and paternal grandmothers, and as well, they all had a daughter Sarah, named after an immediate relative in England. Zachary also had a Sarah.

Robert named his eldest son Zachary, though Robert's father was Ezekiel. The reader will recall that Richard Sanford of Much Hadham, in his will of 1530, bequeathed property in Hatfield. This fact may have had no influence upon Ezekiel Sanford in, or about the year 1607. At just about that time, however, Ezekiel, 22 years of age, appeared in Hatfield. He may have left Much Hadham a few years (at the most) before that. At no time is there a glimpse of what was his trade, or occupation. He married in Hatfield; that is certain. This town, modernly called Hatfield Broad Oak, is about six miles southeast of Much Hadham, over the county-line into the shire of Essex. The records of baptisms, marriages and burials in this parish have been lost, prior to 1662, depriving us of the exact date of his marriage, also of the baptisms of his two eldest sons, Thomas and John, born between 1607 and 1612. We have turned up the will, however, of Ezekiel's father-in-law. This document is quite a revelation. It proves that Thomas Sanford, our emigrant ancestor, was one of the aforesaid sons of Ezekiel; but more remarkable than that, this will reveals that Ezekiel's brother-in-law was the guiding genius who accompanied the Sanford emigrants to America. Andrew Warner, now the proven uncle of Thomas, Robert and Andrew Sanford, and perhaps the uncle of Zachary Sanford, has been long known as a founder of Hartford in Connecticut. We have thus discovered not only Andrew Warner's home and parentage in England but, in him, we find the older mind, that either planned the emigration or that fell in with the ideas of his nephews and became their adviser, the director of their emigration, and their close friend in the New World. Ezekiel Sanford was present in Hatfield Broad Oak on the sixteenth day of July, 1614, when he wrote his name at the end of his father-in-law's will, as a witness. It is judged that he had lived in Hatfield, probably at his wife's home, from the time of their marriage (about 1607) until the births of their eldest son Thomas (the emigrant to America) and their second son John (who did not emigrate). This couple had eight children (in the records): the younger six were baptized at Stanstead Mountfitchet, the home of Ezekiel's grandparents, Richard and Elizabeth Sanford. It was at Stanstead Mountfitchet that Ezekiel finally settled. He did so either shortly before the death of his father-in-law or within four months after that event. In presenting a full abstract of the short will of John Warner, father of Ezekiel's wife, it will be noted that the testator did not give the Christian name of his daughter who married Ezekiel Sanford. Daughters Elizabeth and Rose are named. Ezekiel's wife was evidently either Rose, or a possible unnamed daughter, Mary, (the mother's name). John Warner was a real yeoman of England. A yeoman meant a man who owned land, a freeholder, and who lived upon that land and who tilled it. The lands he owned were not extensive; a few closes, or fields, of from two to six acres each, divided by hedges, comprised his holdings. He was in average circumstances—neither affluent nor poor. Hatfield Broad Oak was ever a country village. We have not peered deeply into the Warner family. Further search may reveal something about it worth while. Here is the will of John Warner, grandfather of Thomas, Robert and Andrew Sanford and perhaps of Zachary Sanford, the emigrants to America:

Commissary Court of London, Essex and Herts. (Filed Will.) 16 July, 12 James I. (1614)

John X WARNER

Witnesses. Ezeakell SANFORD, Christofer WILKIN, Robert HOWE. (No note of probate.)

Andrew Warner, at the date of this will, was a minor as the form of the bequest to him—a yearly allowance—suggests. His brother Thomas, the residuary legatee, and evidently the eldest son, doubtless inherited the bulk of their father's estate. Andrew had good cause to seek his fortune in America.

Of the Sanfords nothing further has been found of record in connection with their stay at Hatfield Broad Oak. Short though this stay there was, this town was the home of the mother of the emigrants; and Thomas (the emigrant) and his brother John were probably born here, in their mother's girlhood home. Would the reader care to know something of this sober village, upon the slope of a low hill, ere we follow Ezekiel and family back to the little farm, in Stanstead Mountfitchet, of his grandparents Richard and Elizabeth Sanford?

Thirty miles from London, and 8671 acres in extent, was old Hatfield Broad Oak, also called Hatfield Regis or King's Hatfield, and Hatfield, partly because it was all owned by a king of England, and also to distinguish it from Hatfield Peverel, another place in Essex. In 1860, the town was divided into three parishes, the additional two being Hatfield Heath and Bush End. Hatfield proper is still ancient in appearance despite its several mansions and the modern country houses of London men. Its three miles from the railway should keep the old houses from destruction yet awhile. The town is happily on the gently rising slopes (south and west) of an eminence, which affords views over the well-reaped fields. The village street is more business-like than that at Much Hadham. Which ones of the many fields were those of John Warner, there is scarcely any means of knowing now. Richard Sanford of Much Hadham, however, specified that one of his houses in Hatfield was "a tenement in Hatfelde lying highest in the town." Perhaps he would not quite identify one of those now standing near the hill-crest as his, for alterations have made some of them less artistic than of yore. The thoughtful, well-informed visitor will have no difficulty in suiting his fancy as to which house, in its earlier glory of the rustic beauty of simplicity, fits the sort of man Ezekiel Sanford's father-in-law was.

There was once a Benedictine priory here, founded by Alberic or Aubrey de Vere, second of that name and father of the first Earl of Oxford, in 1135. This foundation was dedicated to God, St. Mary and St. Melanius Redonensis, a British or American saint, who, as his name implies, sprung from Rennes, in Brittany, where there was an abbey bearing his name. There were nine monks here and the priory stood until the reformation in England, when Henry VIII. ordered all such ecclesiastical institutions demolished, or confiscated, and severing the churches in England from papal control, perhaps forever. The old parish church has its venerable features, but prosperity hereabouts, has wrought modern changes in it. It is a large structure for a country town, generally in the perpendicular style of architecture of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. Some portions appear to be of an older date and formed part of the original priory church. There is a chancel, a clerestoried nave of six bays, north porch, and a lofty embattled tower facing the west, as do nearly all of the old church-towers of England.

No old Warner or Sanford gravestones exist. In the church is an effigy of Robert de Vere, third Earl of Oxford, one of the barons appointed to enforce Magna Charta, "the Englishman's first declaration of independence," in the year 1215. He died in 1221. The windows of the church and furniture are all modern.

Hatfield Forest, of about a thousand acres, lies to the northwest of the town and is the property of a gentleman whose seat adjoins the forest. This is a favorite resort for Londoners seeking a quiet day in the country. In the forest are the remains of a very large old oak (now carefully fenced round and preserved) called the "Doodle Oak" and conjectured to be that from which the place acquired the name of Broad Oak. The visitor must not miss a stroll through the forest. The manor of Hatfield was a royal manor held under the Crown and granted first after the Conquest (1066) to the family of de Gernon, which took the name of Mountfitchet; on their extinction, King Henry III. granted it to Isabella de Bruce. She fixed her residence at Bromesho Bury, a house in Hatfield, as did her son Robert, Earl of Carrick. The latter's son Robert, became a competitor for the crown of Scotland, and so forfeited his property in Hatfield. The manor of Hatfield was long regarded as most desirable property. Noted families have held it. Some of the old lords of it were the de Bohuns, the Staffords, the Riches, the Barringtons, and the Lowndes. Bromesho Bury, where the de Bruces resided, is worth seeing; it is now a farm house, surrounded by a moat, and belongs to the Earl of Roden. Old Barrington Hall, the original seat of the Barringtons, is also now a farmhouse at the edge of the forest. A newer Barrington Hall was erected about 1740; and the stately timber amid which the hall stands renders the surrounding park a fine one. Another ancient place here to be visited is Gladwyns, near Hatfield Heath; it has borne that name since temp Edward II (1307). No Warners or Sanfords reside in Hatfield now.

Ezekiel Sanford saw no future for himself here. In fact, the prospect of a brilliant future for any of his family was hardly imaginable, as life went in those days, for men of unpretentious birth. His father had bequeathed to him three plots of land of three acres in Stanstead Mountfitchet, which had been Ezekiel's grandfather's. So he made the most of it by settling upon it. A glimpse of this property is had from the tax records. Ezekiel's grandfather was taxed on the land as follows:

(Public Record Office) Roll 110-117.

"Lay Subsidy, Essex. Hundreds of Clavering and Freshwell."

"8 Elizabeth (1566) Stansted Muntfychet."

"Rychard Samforde in Lond XXs (annual value)—XVId." (amount paid).

Thus the assessed value of the annual income from the piece of land was then £1., and tax paid, sixteen pence, or a fifteenth of the annual value. This seems, at first thought, to represent land of small value and size, perhaps merely a garden. The monetary standard of today must be applied to the old record, for it is known that, by present reckoning, the value would be nearly ten times as great as by the old financial terms. It is fair to hold that the land yielded $50 annually in some form. Six years later, in 1562, the grandfather was taxed as a merchant:

"Lay Subsidy. 111-441. 14 Elizabeth." (Subsidy on goods, a shilling per £.)

"Stansted Mountfitchett."

"Richard Sampforde, goods iii li (annual value) iiis (amount paid)."

The next subsidy roll in which our Sanfords figured is that of 1597, after Richard's death. The tax in this year was increased nearly three times. Elizabeth, the widow of Richard, still carried on the business of her late husband, while the title of the land had become vested in their son Thomas, the glover, of Much Hadham:

"Lay Subsidy 111-500. 39 Elizabeth (1597)."

"Stanstead Mountfitchett. Goodes."

"Sampford Widdow iii li —— —— viiis.

In another assessment levied in the same year of 1597, the widow was assessed eight shillings on a stock of goods in hand to the annual value of £3:

"Lay Subsidy. 111-519. 39 Elizabeth."

"Stansted Mountfitchet."

"Sampford widowe. Goodes iii li—viiis.

These goods may have been gloves awaiting sale. It is clear that a glover, or other similar tradesman in those times, in the country, sold his product about as fast as it was made, working upon order, instead of accumulating a large stock. The subsidy rolls after 1597, are very scattering for Stanstead Mountfitchet, only one roll being preserved for the period of James I. (1603-1624); and for Charles I. (1624-1648) there are only extant the rolls for the assessments of 1627-8 and 1636. No Sanfords are named in these rolls. Nevertheless, Ezekiel Sanford continued to reside in this parish. Realizing this, a complete search has been made of the church records. There may still exist, in the possession of the lord of the manor, the rolls of the manorial courts that were held here several times in each year for centuries past. The estimable lord, however, secluded in his towering mansion behind the parish church, has declined to answer the queries addressed to him by the persistent inquirer. Some day, the parliament will declare manorial court rolls to be public records. Until then, some (few) lords of manors will continue, with fine disdain, to refuse to permit the pestiferous genealogist from copying the harmless data about innocent, ancient tenants, that are now, by such somewhat narrow-minded lords, looked upon as strictly private property that it would never do to have examined. There is much that we want to know about Ezekiel Sanford here in Stanstead Mountfitchet, and there is nothing else left in the way of records to be examined. The church records afford some consolation. Ezekiel's oldest sons, Thomas and John, as we have concluded, were born at their mother's home in Hatfield Broad Oak. The other children were all born in Stanstead Mountfitchet. The registers of baptisms, marriages and burials in this parish begin in 1558. They seem to be complete in every year. The law required that every child should be baptized as soon after birth as reasonably possible. Occasionally some people evaded this law, for various reasons. The extreme non-conformists defied the law as a matter of prejudice, of difference of opinion or belief with the majority which ruled the churches. The only omission that we can call an omission, as to the registers of this parish, is that of the baptism of Zachary Sanford the emigrant. We may content ourselves with the fair thought that he was born and baptized when his parents were on a visit to some other place. Here follows the proof that Robert and Andrew Sanford, the emigrants, were sons of the elder Ezekiel; also the names of the others who were born, married or died in this parish, whose names have not been given already:

"1612 Baptismes. Ezechiell the Sonne of Ezechiell Sampford December — 26."
"1615 Baptismes. Robert the Sonne of Ezechiell Sampford November — 1."
"1617 Baptismes. Andrewe the Sonne of Ezechiell Sampford November — 1."
"1619 Baptismes. Samuell the Sonne of Ezechiell Sampford November 25."
"1622 Baptismes. Mary the daughter of Ezechiell Sampford ffebruarie 13."
"1624 Baptismes. Jonathan the Sonne of Ezechiell Sampford Januarie 18."

Of these children nothing has been found to indicate what became of Ezekiel the younger, if he grew up. Robert and Andrew went to America with (or followed) their elder brother Thomas Sanford and their uncle Andrew Warner, after whom Andrew Sanford was named. The son Samuel, baptized as above, was buried ten days after his baptism, viz.:

"1619. Burialles. Samuell Sampford, December 5."

As to Mary, the only recorded daughter of Ezekiel, Sr., we have discovered nothing further. The same is true with respect to her brother Jonathan. If they lived to maturity, they are not of record in their home-town, nor in the probate records of Essex or Hertfordshire.

As to John, the second son of Ezekiel, Sr., mentioned as such with his elder brother Thomas in the will of their maternal grandfather, John Warner, he married Olim (probably in middle age) continued to reside in Stanstead Mountfitchet, died there, and had these children baptized as per the parish records:

"Baptismes. 1654 ffrances the Sonn of John Samford was Borne the 7th of August, and Baptised September 1."
"Baptismes. 1656 Philip the Sonn of John Samford borne 17th of May and baptised June 6."
"Baptismes. 1658 James the Sonn of John Samford was borne the 13th of June and baptised June 25."
"Baptismes. 1661, Ann the Daughter of John Samford was borne 21 July, baptised August 24."

The son Philip died:—

"Buriall 1679 Philip Samford October 24."

His mother had died four years earlier, to wit:—

"Burials, 1675, Olim Samford, January 16."

Her husband, John, outlived her four years:—

"Buriall, 1679, John Samford September 5."

Francis, the son of John and Olim Sanford, married, to wit:

"Marriages. Francis Sandford and Elizabeth King; both of Montfitchet Stansted, Essex, 22 September 1699, Profacult." (Register of Bishop's Stortford, Herts.)

The writer is still asking the question—What became of Ezekiel Sanford, Sr., father of the emigrants? The last record of him in Stanstead Mountfitchet is that of January 18, 1624-5, when his son Jonathan was baptized. That Ezekiel was living in England on the 27th of February, 1632, can be proven. Doubtless he remained in Stanstead, but there is no record of his burial there, nor that of his wife. Did he start for America with his sons and brother-in-law, Andrew Warner, and die on the journey, or soon after arrival in New England, leaving his son, John, in possession of the Stanstead home? That is the question! He was but 49 years of age in 1634. If he saw the flower of his family depart forever from his sight, leaving him behind, he was a braver man than if he had embarked with them.

Only one glimpse more do the records afford of the Sanfords before they landed in America. The family, doubtless, lived in or about Stanstead Mountfitchet up to the great denouement. Here follows the last word in the English records upon the emigrants: They had a great-uncle, Richard Sanford, the brother of their grandfather, Thomas Sanford of Much Hadham, mentioned so trustfully in the latter's will of 1597. This Richard lived to be about eighty years of age. He lived to see his younger relatives start for America. Heaven claimed him soon after that great adventure. His will was made two years before any of them appeared in America. To his credit, be it remembered, that childless as he appears to have been himself, he did not change his will, but left his kind remembrance for his nephew's children to stand, to be sent to them in their new home beyond that permanent barrier (to him)—the forbidding sea. This Richard Sanford died in the autumn of the year 1636, at North Weald (Bassett) in Essex, midway on the road from Stanstead to London and about eleven miles south of Hatfield Broad Oak, or sixteen miles south of Stanstead. The Sarah and Zachary Sanford, named in the will, were his niece and nephew, the respective aunt and uncle of the Sanford emigrants. The will also refers to the children of his niece Priscilla (Sanford) Howe, and to the Makens and Grubbs, who must have been relatives of the testator's wife:

Noble, indeed, is the natural setting of the parish church of Stanstead Mountfitchet. A half-mile of gently descending plain, ever green, studded with trees just enough, reaches westward to the steep banks of the narrow vale, across which the old village began to stretch up the long opposite slope for half a mile or more. At the top of the hill, the village street finds its western end; yet turning sharply to right and left the king's highroad from Cambridge to London runs north and south, splendidly maintained, and lined upon either side with houses, low, quaint and old, or modernly stately and beautiful. This road was built by the Romans, fifteen hundred years ago, or more. The town is about forty miles in circumference, being one of the largest in Essex. From the vale half-way between the old church and this highway along the western boundary of the town, are the remains of a castle, supposed to have been built by that William Gernon, surnamed Montfitchet (after the place-name), who was also identified with Hatfield Broad Oak, as we have stated. Two miles south of the church stood Tremhall or Tranchall priory, by the side of Hatfield Forest. The forest reaches from Hatfield Broad Oak into Stanstead, and so the journeys of the Sanfords between these two places made them familiar with the woods by day. Many are the tales of romance and of highwaymen they must have heard in which Hatfield Forest was concerned. The priory was founded by Gilbert Montfitchet in the reign of William I. (1066-1087) for canons of the Augustinian order. Slight remains of the building still exist, though the memorials over the graves of the early De Veres, Barringtons and Montfitchets are no more. The present manor house of Stanstead Mountfitchet is a large Elizabethan building of brick and stone, built near the site of the old hall that was here in the Sanfords' time. The grounds about the manor house are four hundred acres in extent, keeping the lords of the manor quite away from the view of the humble homes and faces of the many from whom the lord derives a large income from rentals of houses and land. The old church is within the park. It is dedicated to Saint Mary. The chancel was built in 1120. The outer walls have been modernly rebuilt, yet there remain two very fine Norman arches, one in the chancel, the other over the north doorway. The tower was rebuilt in 1692. On the floor of the chancel, on a small brass plate in the cover of a coped stone, is an inscription to Robert de Bokkyngg, the first vicar of this church, who died September 22, 1361. The general aspect of the interior of the church is modern, as a result of the restoration work of 1888. An old marble monument, under a richly decorated arch and against the south wall of the chancel, is in memory of an old lord of the manor, Sir Thomas Middleton, Knt. He is depicted by a recumbent effigy clad in plate-armor fastened with gilt studs and covered with a red robe trimmed with fur, but the inscription on it is nearly illegible. There is also an interesting monument to his wife, Lady Middleton, who was killed by a stag in Stanstead Park. Perhaps the oldest monument is a figure in stone, under a large pointed arch in the north aisle of the chancel, of a mailed knight, cross-legged, with his feet upon a couchant lion and two angels supporting his helmeted head. The churchyard is both larger and neater than the average in England. Somewhere in it were placed the earliest-known ancestors of the emigrant Thomas Sanford, also others of the family. It may be that the Sanfords go back in this parish much earlier than we have ascertained. The emigrants were last known of here before they went to America. The Sanfords were more identified with this place than with Much Hadham. Hence, when one is asked what was the Sanford ancestral home in England, we may properly reply: Pleasant Stanstead Mountfitchet in the extreme west of Essex.

When Thomas Sanford, his younger brothers, Robert and Andrew, and their very probable kinsman, Zachary Sanford, with their uncle Andrew Warner took a conveyance from Stanstead Mountfitchet for London, to embark, they certainly turned their faces from a country-side that both nature and man had made happy to look upon. The aesthetic side of it probably had little hold upon them, in their youth, as it seldom ever has had for the rugged, unsentimental young Englishmen, who ever since then have continued to go forth to all the distant parts of the world, to become active and contented in any clime or place, be it a wilderness however isolated, or an India overcrowded with humanity.

Material independence was the goal that the Sanfords sought. That has been also the goal of "pretty much" all who have left their England since 1634. When once upon that pedestal, wherever it might be, all else became as naught to the Sanfords, as it has, likewise, become to all emigrant Englishmen since then. Dominion over land, and over any other people who may be on that land, has been the aim and the attainment of the Saxon ever since he came into notice, as a Saxon, along the shore of the Baltic Sea, two thousand years ago.

It is written that the emigrants to New England were, as "the Lord's chosen seed out of Israel," etc., chosen for a great mission of God, making them Christian heroes, sufferers for sake of conscience and martyrs to their religion, and that their coming to America was as a duty to Heaven.

That idea is the popular one; it is all right in many individual cases, but not in the case of all emigrants, not even in the majority of cases—not by any means. We refer to those who came after the Pilgrims of 1620. All fair praise is due to the emigrants, the Sanfords included; but there is another side to the picture—the material side. The Sanfords were a religious family, as religion went in the Church of England in their days there. Religion supported them in their trials upon the sea. It was their great help in the New World; in fact, it was not until after they had settled in America that they realized what the Christian religion held for them. The revelation of its help did not come to them fully until then. They had never so much needed that help before. Then, they made the uttermost of it, and jealously guarded the ideas of Christianity that the settlers themselves had, upon New England soil, first developed and laid down. But what those uncommonly sagacious, hard-headed Englishmen left England for was to better their material condition, to give their children an opportunity to rise above their fathers. They saw that opportunity, in America, for all who were of their social station. They had become tired of being lorded over, in all things, by those who assumed to be their superiors. With this desire ever present in the hearts of the Sanfords and others, to better their material condition, it did not take but a little spark of religious enthusiasm, to kindle into a great resolve, that far-deeper, underlying, fundamental hope of material independence always nurtured in the mind of a poor man; and to them the possession of land meant wealth, money, everything, in due time. The spark that kindled that resolve, for the Sanfords, was probably struck in their minds by Rev. John Eliot,

OLD PART OF VILLAGE, STANSTEAD MOUNTFITCHET

afterwards the Apostle to the Indians, under the general direction of Rev. Thomas Hooker Long residence among the English, and of study of their domestic history, leaves the impression that Englishmen of the seventeenth century were not of that type of men who would allow religious excitement, or anything else, to run away with them. There was much else besides a mere religious motive in the emigration to America of those poor, ambitious, young Englishmen, Thomas Sanford, Andrew Sanford, Robert Sanford, Zachary Sanford, and their uncle, Andrew Warner.

(Thanks are due to Mr. C. E. Sanford for having made it both agreeable and convenient for the writer to have investigated the Sanfords in England and to have prepared this account of them.)

Sanford Coat-of-Arms

It is plain from our English ancestry, so far as shown by Mr. Hoppin, that the descendants of Thomas Sanford are not entitled to the use of Arms, through inheritance, by virtue of direct descent from any known Sanford of England who had a proper right to their use. How then can the descendants of Thomas Sanford make or lay claim to any old Arms or heraldic device? I see and know of no way except, possibly, through and by the doctrine of prescription, of which I will speak more fully a little later, on a seemingly proper application of that doctrine.

I have sought expert advice from those thoroughly versed in heraldry, and I will state what I have learned on the subject, submitting the matter to the respectful consideration of all of my readers. First, it is stated in highly creditable works upon heraldry that coats-of-arms did not come into use in England, in families, until after the Crusades. The Crusades began many years after the Norman Conquest and ended in the latter part of the Thirteenth Century. Crests (borne above the shields of arms) did not become so adopted until 1400. Mottoes are of even a later creation in English heraldry. Of the several distinct Sanford families in England, some used arms and some did not.

As to the use of arms in America, I give an abstract of the recommendations on the subject of Arms adopted by the New England Historic Genealogical Society at its annual meeting in 1899 on report of its committee on heraldry, viz:—

"Prior to the Revolution as subjects of a government recognizing heraldry, certain of the inhabitants were entitled to bear Coats of Arms; but only such as were grantees of Arms, or who could prove descent in the male line from an ancestor to whom Arms were granted or confirmed by the Heralds. * * * The mere fact that an individual possessed a painting of a Coat of Arms, used it upon plate, or, as a book plate or seal, or had it put upon his grave stone, is no proof that he had a right to it. Proof of right must either be found in the Herald's records, or be established by an authenticated pedigree direct from an armiger.

A coat of arms did not belong with a family name, but only to the particular family bearing the name to whose progenitor it had been granted or confirmed; and it was as purely individual a piece of property as a homestead."

Our national and state governments, many cities, towns and societies have adopted and are using arms and seals. What individuals (Sanfords or others) may do is a matter which each should decide for himself. The author of the Sanford Genealogy is without authority to make regulations or recommendations governing the use of any arms; and no authority exists in America for the creation or enforcement of any such regulations. Neither does any official authority now exist in England for such matters. The heralds' courts were abolished generations ago. Kings and queens of England have long since ceased to grant arms. Almost anybody can have a coat-of-arms designed and "granted" (bought and sold) to-day by the body of men called "the heralds", who, as a matter of private business, now carry on the business of selling heraldic information for large fees (especially to susceptible Americans) at the place (the old College of Arms,' London) where the old heralds' courts once were held. The creation of a coat-of-arms to-day, by the "College of Arms", is no more an official governmental proceeding, and no more important, than the designing and use by an American, in the United States, of any armorial device that he may choose to create and use.

It is not for the writer to assume to dictate what any Sanford should or should not do. The value of old coat-armor to an American is chiefly as a souvenir, a relic, a trophy of some ancestor abroad who bore arms and from whom the American descends. I do hope most earnestly that our earliest known direct ancestor, Richard Sanford (who died at Stanstead Mountfitchet, Essex, England, in the year 1591) can be proven to have been related to the heraldic Sandfords of Essex, who are all specifically named in the Heraldic Visitations of Essex in 1612--1634, and as bearing these arms, viz:—

"Per chevron, sable and ermine, on a chevron, or, an escallop gules; in chief two bears' heads erased of the third. Crest; a boar's head erased, sable, in the mouth a broken spear, or headed argent goute gules."

So far as the record of this Visitation goes, there is nothing in it to show that this bearing is older than 1575. If Richard Sanford was in any way related to any heraldic Sanfords, it was far more likely to have been to these Sanfords of his own shire of Essex than to any others. I confess that the prospect of establishing such a relationship late enough (that is, after these arms were granted to these Sandfords of Essex) is not a promising one. I hope that some one will have faith enough in it to have a further attempt made to establish such a relationship, even tho' I have not been able to encompass it, after no little effort. I have been unable to ascertain how old is this coat-of-arms of these Sandfords of Essex; if it is as old as 1450, then the ancestor of these heraldic Sandfords in the Essex Visitation may easily have been closely related to the Essex ancestors of our Richard Sanford who died in 1591. (See cut.)

It is fairly well claimed that the first use of any arms by a Sanford was in the case of one Sir Richard de Sandford in a deed about the year 1240, which arms were "Quarterly per fess indented (points very long) azure and ermine." I do not know whether this deed is extant; my English correspondents have not seen it. The works on heraldry show that there have been, since the thirteenth century, at least fifty quarterings of the Sanford Arms of England. The coat-of-arms of the Sandfords of Shropshire County, England, given in Burke's Landed Gentry, Vol. 2, p. 1411, is described as follows:—

Arms: Quarterly, per fesse, indented azure and ermine.
Crest: A falcon with wings endorsed preying on a partridge.
Motto: Nec Temere, nec timide (neither rashly nor timidly).

A wealthy family in New York City, some years ago, claimed and used this coat-of-arms as shown by a printed leaf sent me. The crest of this bearing, at least, has also been used since the War of the Revolution by Sanfords who early settled in Virginia, as Gen. John W. A. Sanford of Montgomery, Ala., informs me, sending a clear impression of the crest.

In Burke's Landed Gentry may also be found another style of arms for other Sanfords of Shropshire, Isle of Rossall, England. This bearing is described as follows:—

Arms, per chevron sable and ermine, in chief two boars' heads couped close or Crest, a boar's head couped close.
Motto, nec temere, nec timide.

This coat-of-arms, as will be seen, does not agree with the early arms of the Sandfords of Shropshire, but from what I learn, it is the bearing used in later years by the present family of Sandford Manor, Shropshire, England.

This coat is far more in use in America than any other or all others. It was secured by Horatio Gates Sanford of Gloucester, Mass., about 1885, and by him emblazoned and sold to divers San-fords about the country. What was his authority for selling it as the arms of the Thomas Sanford family I do not learn or know. I purchased his papers, manuscripts, etc., but they give no light on this point. The discovery of Thomas Sanford's lineage by Mr. Hoppin seems to entirely discredit any real right or valid claim to this bearing by Thomas' descendants. I do not say that it does, but I know of no clue, or base, or authority, or even a proper written tradition for the claim.

In the accompanying engraving of the Arms sold by Horatio G. Sanford the ducal coronet of gold is omitted, and the large neck of the boar in the crest is also eliminated, as the writer finds no mention of these additions in the published descriptions of this coat of arms. The helmet is that of an esquire, a manorial lord, with its accompanying mantling. The mantling is composed of the colors of the shield, alternating. (See cut.)

Some years ago a descendant of Ezekiel Sanford of Southhampton, Long Island, who was a son of Robert the Pioneer of Hartford, Ct. (who was a brother of the Pioneer Thomas), after considerable research, found, what he believed was the arms to which his family was entitled, to wit:—

Quarterly, 1st and 4th per chevron, sable and ermine, in chief two boars' heads couped close, or; 2d and 3d per fesse, indented azure and ermine.

Crest, A falcon, wings endorsed, preying on a partridge ppr.

Motto, nec temere, nec timide.

This coat-of-arms, as I am advised, is the bearing of the Sandfords of Sandford Court, County of Kilkenny, Ireland. (See Early History of Southampton, L. I., by Howell.)

The coat-of-arms used by the late Hon. William Eli Sanford of Hamilton, Canada, a descendant of the Pioneer Thomas, is like that sold by Horatio Gates Sanford excepting that the boar's head in the crest is far more genuine, having a huge tusk with the ducal crown in which it rests raised above a wreath.

The descendants of John Sanford of Rhode Island, may have some sort of a right to Arms by Prescription, if we apply that doctrine to heraldry in the United States, since a coat-of-arms was actually cut into the gravestone of William Sanford of Newport,

R. I., who died April 24, 1721, and also into other stones, as I am advised. This bearing is described as follows:—

Arms: Ermine on a chief gu, two boars' heads couped, or Crest: A demi-eagle displayed
Motto: Nec temere, nec timide. (See cut.)

There is a seal on the will (Mar. 7, 1777) of Lemuel Sanford, of Redding, Ct., which is the oldest used by any member of the family in this country, so far as known, and thought by some Sanfords, for that reason, to be the more authoritative than any other. (See cut.) Applying to American use the idea of Prescription, the descendants of Lemuel Sanford may be entitled to use the device stamped upon that seal under the ruling of Sir William Dugdale, Garter King of Arms, (Lansdowne Ms. 70, folio 88) under date of 15 June, 1668, as follows:—

"It is incumbent that a man doe look over his own evidence for some seals of Arms, for perhaps it appears in them, and if soe, and they have used it from the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's reigne, or about that time, I shall then allowe thereof for our directions are limiting us soe to doe, and not a shorter prescription of age."

Here, as may be observed, we have a positive rule laid down by the highest heraldic authority that a man is justified in using a coat-of-arms, providing it has been used by a member of his family for one hundred years or about that time.

I have sent to Fairfield to examine the seal upon the will of Lemuel Sanford, a gentleman, thoroughly posted upon heraldry, and particularly as to seals upon genealogical documents. He reports in part as follows:—

"This seal does not bear the impress of any crest known in the heraldic works of England, as that borne by any Sanford, either before or after the said date of 1777. There is a slight resemblance to the crest of 'a demi-eagle displayed' which latter crest has been used by Sanfords in Rhode Island. But the impression upon the red wax, upon this will, is none other than that known in heraldry as an 'eagle rising, regardant.' (See Fairbairn's Crests of the Families of Great Britain and Ireland, compiled from the best authorities, by James Fairbairn, and revised by Laurence Butters, Seal Engraver in ordinary to the Queen, 1860,' Vol. I.). This crest was borne by the British families of Agnew, de Brecs, Bruse, Candler, Dethicke, Ramsay, Waters and Weston.

It may be asked: How came that seal of 'an eagle rising regardant' upon Lemuel Sanford's will? There are several likely ways in which it might have been done. First, it should be remembered, that seals of crests, or other devices, that have been put upon probate documents, were often not the arms, crest, mark or device of a testator. Genealogists have learned not to be misled by such seals, as they are frequently made with the die of some witness, notary, minister, physician, maternal relative, or neighbor present when a document was signed, and who had the die in his (or her) pocket, upon a ring or watch-charm.

It may not be amiss to believe that Lemuel Sanford was an honest man, one who would not knowingly use a Sanford crest or coat-of-arms, or any other, unless he believed that he had a right to it. Equally likely it is, to my mind, that he did not know that he was entitled to a crest other than one he might believe to be of his own invention. If he chose an eagle rising, who shall say that he was not very familiar with that bird in his poultry yard, or in the Fairfield woods, or, better, still, patriotic enough to 'let the eagle scream' during the War of the Revolution? I rather choose to look upon it as being the famous American eagle; and to look upon Lemuel Sanford as one of the first Americans to use that device after the Declaration of Independence. What greater honor, in insignia, need any Sanford ask for than that?

Now as to Prescription: If any of Lemuel's direct descendants wish for a seal, with a device upon it, who shall say that they are not reasonably free to take that seal upon their ancestor Lemuel's will, for private use, as a souvenir of him? But not as a souvenir of anybody else—and not in connection with any English shield of arms; and particularly not as a device used by any of his (Lemuel's) known ancestors."————C. A. Hoppin.

I have deemed it to be my obligation to the Sanfords of America and my duty to myself, to state facts as concisely as possible, as I have observed them, without fear or favor. I will, I am sure, be pardoned for not mentioning several other coats-of-arms which have been sent to me, used by Sanfords in various parts of this country. As to heraldry, I feel that

"Kind hearts are more than coronets
And simple faith than Norman blood."

I know that the kind heart and the simple faith of our ancestor, Thomas Sanford, who died in 1597, are proven by his will to be facts that can never be doubted. I know that his was the aristocracy of character, not of "birth"; that his knighthood was manhood direct from the hand of God, and not the gift of "royalty". I know that his patent of nobility was in his good and great endeavor, not in presence "at court." And I know that his insignia of merit was in the respect of his neighbors. In the face of such heritages, all the pretensions of and to coat-armor are, to me, as nothing.

NOTE: The real colors of the different parts of the cuts of

Thomas Sanford in America

By the Author.

The preceding article, logically built up and well written by Mr. Hoppin on the Ancestry of Thomas Sanford leaves little to be said as to his parentage. I feel sure that his descendants everywhere, one and all, will not only be pleased but elated to learn that we have at last, after more than two and a half centuries, learned from whence in England our progenitor came and furthermore the names of his ancestors, for three generations.

The vital and essential parts of Mr. Hoppin's article, to wit, —the wills of Thomas Sanford (1597), John Warner, (1614), Richard Sanford, (1636), the baptisms at Stanstead Mountfitchet, and the baptisms, marriages and burials at Much Hadham, have been confirmed to me by the Senior Registrar of the Principal Probate Court of London, England; by the Rev. A. M. Wicker, Vicar of Stanstead, Essex County, England, and by the Rev. R. S. Gregory of Much Hadham, Hertford County, England.

We can now, if we will, go to the very locality in which he was born and also to the neighborhood in which he was reared to early manhood. We can, no doubt, if we will, by great effort and expense, now that we have a base or starting point, trace his lineage still further back.

This work I must leave to the Sanford Association, or to some generous, enthusiastic Sanford in the future. I have already spent a very large sum to learn what I have secured. Two of the three genealogists who searched for me in England, one of them in ten or a dozen counties, failed to get any clue to Thomas' ancestry. I had almost despaired of getting any light on Thomas' lineage when Mr. Hoppin wrote me from England that the little clue I had given him promised fine results.

This Mr. Hoppin pursued with the result shown in his elaborate article. Again, I have not the time nor the disposition to expend more money in tracing Thomas' genealogy further into the past since my work is drawing to a close.

When I began the work, over four years ago, I felt sure that I could, without much difficulty, soon learn of or ascertain some proof that the Sanford family in America descended from Gen. Thomas de Sanford who went over from Normandy (north of France) with William the Conqueror who subjugated England in 1066.

Such a tradition had come to me some thirty years earlier from well informed Sanfords and, of course, I was disposed to believe the story. When I came to ask these and other Sanfords for some proof of the fact I was greatly surprised to learn that they had none, that they had heard it or learned it from some Sanford then deceased.

Oldest Sanford Seat in England.

The oldest Sanford "seat" in England, so far as I have been able to learn is Sanford Manor in Salop (Shropshire) county, England. Many Sanfords in America believe this property was originally Gen. Thomas de Sanford's share of the spoils in the conquest of England. The article of Mr. Hoppin, practically, if not wholly, destroys any further belief that such was the fact. Sanford Manor is now held by the widow of Thomas Hugh Sanford and on her death, there being no male heir, (for the first time in its history) will pass into collateral hands. To this rural estate situate a two hours' ride from the station at White Chapel, those of the Sanfords in America who have taken any interest in the family's lineage, have felt that it was their family estate, the home of their earliest ancestor, Gen. Thomas de Sanford. Though they have not a particle of proof that it is they have "breathed" it so long that some of them have come to verily believe it.

Mr. Edward R. Sanford, Jr., of St. Paul, Minn., visited the Manor in 1904 and took luncheon with Mrs. Sandford believing he was in the home of his earliest known ancestor. Mrs. Sandford informed him that a great many attempts had been made in years past on the part of Sanfords in America to show that they were descendants of the Sandfords of Sandford Manor, but that all such attempts had proved utterly futile, that it could not be shown. Mr. Sanford promised her that on his return to this country he would send her the proof of the connection. This he found upon his return, to his great surprise, he was unable to furnish.

Tradition as to Family Lineage.

In all my research and study in libraries and elsewhere, correspondence with Sanfords in many states who have given the matter a good deal of study and some investigation, I have never found or learned of any proof or of any semblance of proof that Thomas Sanford the emigrant to America was a descendant of a Gen. Thomas de Sanford of 1066 or of the family that has held Sandford Manor during the past centuries, nor do I believe that any Sanford in America holds any official writing or other reliable memorandum showing this, or even showing from what part of England Thomas came to America or even the names of his parents.

I confess I had great misgivings also that, if it were true, that it could be now shown. I well knew that if Thomas were a descendant of that family of Shropshire, he in all human probability, must have been a descendant of one of the sons other than the first son since the first son probably took the property by entail. All the other sons in a way had to go out into the world and shift for themselves. One can readily imagine what a multitude of Sanfords would, in a few centuries, spring from these in all parts of England. As it seemed to me, our ancestor was far more likely to have sprung from one of these families, otherwise he would not have emigrated to the inhospitable shores of America in the 17th century.

The task of finding him as I progressed in the work appalled me. It did look to be a herculean task indeed, since there were Sanfords all over England, from any county in which and from any hamlet in every county he might have emigrated.

And yet, notwithstanding all this, I came in contact with many Sanfords who were so sure, though they had no proof or evidence other than hearsay or what is called tradition, that they were descendants of Gen. Thomas de Sanford of 1066 and of the Sandford Manor family, of Shropshire that it had become a conviction with them. The discovery which Mr. Hoppin has made will be a hard blow to them. It does not disturb me in the least and I do not think it will the great majority of Sanfords about the country. I wish to know the truth.

I have always gravely doubted that we are of Norman descent. The name Sandford is surely a place name and it seems to me more Saxon than Norman. I am sure the most of us would prefer a Saxon origin.

The will of our emigrant ancestor's grandfather Thomas Sanford, shows him to have been a prosperous, successful man, of a kindly and generous nature and of exceptional character. All San-fords may well be proud of him. The gentle care, interest and concern shown by him for his kith and kin is a greater heritage than would come from most cases of nobility, or rank. Well may we be proud of him and our ancestry.

Several Sanford Emigrants to America.

I had not proceeded far in my labors upon the work when I discovered to my surprise that several other Sanfords were emigrants to this country at about the same time that Thomas came, and a little further in my work I was greatly annoyed and perplexed in finding that the names of the children, grandchildren, etc., of three of these other pioneers were very largely the same as those given to the descendants of Thomas Sanford. The four pioneers who named their children so much alike were, Thomas of Milford, and Robert, Andrew, and Zachary, of Hartford, Ct. In 1667, Andrew went to Milford where of course his descendants got more or less into the same records as did those of Thomas. In 1651, Zachary settled in Saybrook only some forty miles distant. Thus it will be seen that these four men were only a few miles separated, and as the generations increased settled on the intervening territory and country round about. It was not long before I found it not only expedient but necessary to work out the descendants of all four of the Pioneers to enable me to tell with certainty which were the descendants of Thomas. This data for a few generations I preserve in the Appendix to this work for the benefit of the descendants of Robert, Andrew and Zachary and any future genealogist of either family. The great similarity of names among the children and grandchildren &c of these four Pioneers, with the fact of their settlement at or about the same time, and three of them in the same neighborhood, led me at an early date, not only to suspect but to believe that they were closely related, brothers very likely, cousins at the farthest.

The Only Records as to Thomas Sanford's Lineage.

The only records of which I have learned in all my struggles bearing on the nativity of Thomas Sanford are three in number. Two of these are so palpably erroneous that I will only speak of them briefly:—

The first of these that I will mention is found in the caption to the Sanford part of the work, "Rev. John Reach and John Sanford and their Descendants," published in 1898. In this caption is the following:—

> "We have reason to believe that our Thomas of Milford was a son of Anthony Sanford and Joane, daughter of John Stratford: that Anthony was a son of Raulf Sanford of Stowe, County of Gloucester, England; that Thomas married Dorothy, daughter of Henry Meadows of Stowe; that he came to Boston, Mass., with the John Winthrop Colony in 1631-3."

This information was given to Edward Jackson Sanford, an enthusiastic Sanford of Knoxville, Tenn., by Horatio Gates Sanford of Gloucester, Mass., who worked for some years gathering material for a Sanford genealogy, though his name is there given as Henry Sanford.

It will be noticed that the whole statement is predicated upon the qualifying words "we have reason to believe" and well it should be, since all that is there given may be found in the Harleian Society Publications, Vol. 21, page 220. The name Thomas appears in Appendix No. 1, which record states that the family records there given were taken on a Visitation (an inquiry as to families bearing arms) made in 1569. We know that our Thomas died in Milford in 1681 which makes it absolutely impossible that he could have been the Thomas Sanford who married Dorothy daughter of Henry Meadows, there given, and we can dismiss the consideration thereof without hesitation.

The second record of which I will speak bearing on the nativity of Thomas Sanford, is an article on the life of Nathan Sanford, who was twice elected United States Senator from New York, in the Sag Harbor Express (Long Island) of May 21, 1908. In this the pedigree of Nathan is given as follows:

> "Hugh Sanford of England died in 1530. He had a son Robert who died in 1598. He had three children, Arthur, Francis and Thomas. The last was a captain of ordinance and was killed Jan. 22, 1643 while attempting to storm Nantwick. His estate was confiscated by Parliament and his children came to America. One of these was Robert Sandford, of Hartford, Ct. He had a son Ezekiell who went to Bridgehampton, Long Island in 1670 and from whom Nathan descended."

This does not help us as to the lineage of Thomas unless it be shown that he was a brother of Robert, which Mr. Hoppin now shows in his article, and, since he does, the article deserves some attention. It is certainly a clear, clean cut and pretty story and gives the family a connection with the eminent family of Salop (Shropshire) County, England.

But is it true? That is the point. I find in Burke's Landed Gentry, Vol. 11, p. 1326, what, it seems to me, is a complete refutation of the foregoing story. The descendants of Hugh Sanford are there given. Robert, who died in 1598, is given only sons Arthur and Thomas, no Francis. Thomas was killed, as stated in the article in the Express, but left no children to come to America for the very good reason that it is not given that he ever married or left any issue. Nor was his estate confiscated. The estate of his nephew Francis was confiscated but restored in 1645. All the other descendants seem to be fully accounted for in England. The Author of the article in the the Express, William L. Pelletreau, Esq., of N. Y. C., wrote the writer that, the information contained in the article was given to him by the late Robert Sanford, son of Nathan.

Therefore I do not see nor do I believe that any credence whatever can be given to this story.

The third item of a record as to where the Pioneer Sanfords came from in England may be found in the Court Records at Hartford, Ct. There we find this entry:—

> "A County Court Dec. 5, 1678 held in Hartford, whereas, it appears that Miles Clay of Brantery in England, deceased hath an estate in the estate of Zachary Sanford, late of Saybrooke. This Court doth see reason to grant John Durrant and John Loomy of Hadly in right of his wife who are grandchildren of the said Clay, administration upon the said estate, they being next of kin and having agreed to accept of administration."

This record I regard as not only the best, but really the only clue to be found in America as to where those four Pioneer Sanfords who settled in Hartford or near by came from in England. It does not, it is true, speak of Thomas except it could be shown that he was a brother of Zachary, in which case it would locate him also.

It was this clue which I persisted in following up after I learned of it and which led Mr. Hoppin to the discovery he has made. Well may the Thomas Sanford family take pride even, in the fact that Zachary Sanford was indebted to or under engagement to pay Miles Clay some money. Had it not been for this Court record I certainly would never have discovered the parentage of Thomas Sanford or the locality in England from whence he came and, very likely, but for it, his parentage would never have been learned.

The fact that Zachary Sanford is not shown by the wills or baptismal records, given by Mr. Hoppin, to have been a brother or even a relative of Thomas does not lessen the importance of the Court record in the discovery. I am still disposed to think he was possibly a brother, or at any rate a near relative. It is possible that he was born while his parents were in another locality and so did not get a record of baptism at Stanstead Mountfitchet, with the others or that the last child Jonathan later took the name of Zachary.

Proof of Relationship and Ancestry.

What made me think early in my work, and still does, that they were brothers is the fact that the names Ezekiel and Sarah are found among the children of all four of the Pioneers, the names Mary, Elizabeth and Hannah in three of the families and the names Abigail and Zachary in two of them. From this I felt all the while that if the names of their parents were ever learned they would be found to be Ezekiel and Sarah or Mary. The name of the father, Mr. Hoppin shows to have been Ezekiel, but the Christian name of the mother has not been learned.

Another reason for thinking them brothers was the fact that many Sanfords about the country wrote me that "their grandfather had told their father years ago", that three (some of them had it four) brothers came to this country, together, that it had always been so understood in the family." Among those members of the family who took, and now take, an interest in such matters, this seems to be not only a prevailing, but a fixed tradition, and now it is proven by Mr. Hoppin to have been a fact.

One of the very best items of proof that the Thomas, Robert and Andrew, sons of Ezechiell Sanford of Stanstead Mountfitchet, England, are the identical Thomas, Robert and Andrew Sanford who came to America is the fact that Andrew Warner, who was their uncle (brother of their mother) came to New England in 1632. He was first in Cambridge and made a Freeman in Boston, May 14, 1634. He went to Hartford, Ct., with the original proprietors there, where he lived till 1656, when he removed with his second wife, Esther, to Hadley, Mass., on account of religious troubles. He took the oath of allegiance there Feb. 8, 1679, and died there Dec. 18, 1684, aged 90, making his birth in 1594. He had seven children and one of them, Mary, married John Street, Jr., whose father lived four miles out of Braintree, England, and his mother was of that town. (See "Savage's Dictionary of the First Settlers of New England.") The court order at Hartford, given on a previous page, shows that John Durrant and Mrs. John Loomy, grandchildren of Miles Clay, of Braintree, England, whose estate had a claim against the estate of Zachary Sanford, were living in Hadley in 1678. Braintree is in Essex, England and only twenty-five miles east of Stanstead Mountfitchet, where Ezechiel Sanford, father of Thomas, Robert and Andrew resided. From these facts it is plain that they were all of the Braintree Company that came to America.

Whether Andrew Warner who came in 1632 and was older than his nephews, Thomas, Robert and Andrew, came alone or was accompanied by them, as also Zachary, Nathaniel and Richard, cannot now be learned.

Thomas Sanford's Appearance in America.

It is a tradition among many Sanfords over the country that Thomas Sanford came over to this country as a member of the John Winthrop Colony in the year 1630. I find no proof of this. It is, in fact, quite safe to say that he did not come with him.

The Sanfords who came over were more under the influence of Hooker and Eliot who came a little later.

There is nothing strange however, in tradition making him a member of the John Winthrop Colony since he was a great and noble man—the George Washington of those early times. According to the genealogies about the country it would seem that nearly every Pioneer came over with him.

Mr. Winthrop was a resident of Groton, in the southwest of Suffolk, a county on the east coast of England. It adjoins Essex County, on the north, from whence Thomas came. He was a man of such note at home that his emigration caused more than a thousand people to follow him to the Massachusetts coast that same year. Poor and struggling as they were then along the Massachusetts coast, what a burden must such an influx of people have been!

The first instance that I find of the appearance of the name Thomas Sanford is in the Town Records of Dorchester, Mass. If any vital records were kept there they are lost. This place was settled in 1630, but no lands were allotted till April 3, 1633. It is now a part of Boston and called South Boston and Dorchester. The town records begin January 16, 1632. The first settlers prior to 1636 were one hundred and thirty eight in number, and Thomas Sanford was one of them. He was made a Freeman March 9, 1637. This right or title conferred upon the holder the right of suffrage and also an advantage in the division of lands. The principal qualification for this position was church membership.

A freeman was required to be of godly walk and conversation, to be at least twenty years of age, to take an oath of allegiance to the government of Massachusetts, to be worth £200, to hold office if elected or pay a fine of forty shillings, to vote at all elections or pay the same fine. In the first batch of twenty four made Freeman the name of Thomas Sanford does not appear. The first official entry or record of Thomas Sanford in this country is to be found in the Dorchester Town Records (original), page 12, of November 22, 1634, to wit:—

> "It is ordered that Thomas Thornton, Thomas Sandford, Henry Wright shall have four akers of ground on the west side of the way by Mr. Hawthorne's by the brooke on Roxbury boundes."

Ibid, page 18, January 4, 1635, Thomas Sandford was alloted sixteen acres in the same locality.

Ibid. page 19, February 18, 1635, Goodman Sampford was allotted two acres in the fresh marsh nearest the town.

The title "Goodman" is another evidence of his good standing since it was bestowed only upon worthy citizens.

"Dorchester, Mass., Town Voter pg. 15, 17 April 1635. It is agreed with Thomas Thornton and Thomas Sanford to undertake the keepeing of the cowes for the space of seven moneths to begin the 15 of April for which they are to have 5s 3d the cowes if there be six score, if not so many the owners of the cowes are to make up their pay to £31 10s, if there be more they are to take their advantage and this to be payed the one half in May and the other halfe at the 7 month's end.

In consideration whereof the foresayd prtys promise to fetch all the cowes from Jonathan Gillets house to Mr. Woolcotts, and from John Greenways to Walter Filers and to drive them forth in the morning an hower after sun rising, and at coming in to drive thron and turn over the bridge those that are beyond that way, also one of them doth promise to keep them every lord's day and the plantation to find another according as shall be agreed in an equall proportion."

Ibid, page 22, 1636: "It is ordered that Mathias Session and Thomas Sampford shall keep the cowes this year (1637) to begin the 17 Aprill and to continue the keepeing them till the 15 November, to have for their pay in keeping five shill the head for as many as are brought in the sayd five shill p' head to be payd one third in hand, one third at halfe the tyme, the other at the end of the tyme.

It is also ordered that all that have cowes shall put them to the keepers to be keept in the ordinary cowe pasture, and none to be put away at the Necke of Land or keepe them otherwise about the Towne or from the herd, on payne of ten shillings for (sich) offending. Also that all that live Northwards from the meeting house shall (have) their cowes into the open place before the meeting house within an houer of sunne rising and their keepers to be ready to drive them away and to be ready to blow their horne along the towne, and whosoever bring not their cowes before Mr. Stoughton's house within an houer sunne rising the keeper shall stay no longer (but) drive away those which are redy to the pasture, and those which through their (owne) neglect have their cowes behind shall not make that any Basse of payment to the keepers."

Ibid, March 9, 1636-7. He was admitted freeman of Mass. Bay Colony.

"Ibid, pg. 36, March 18, 1637: Allotted to Thomas Sampford in necke, two akers, one quarter, twenty four rodes.

"Ibid, page 47, April 1, 1640: "Ordered that Thomas Sampford (two others) shall have each one aker and halfe of marsh in Mr. Hawkin's necke which was formerly granted them but not booked."

The last grant or rather "booking" of a grant was made as the record states, to confirm an oral grant previously made.

There is no record of the marriage of Thomas Sanford to be found in the Registry Department Records of Dorchester or Boston, nor in the History of Dorchester by the Dorchester Antiquarium and Historical Society published in 1859, nor in James Savage's great work, "The Dictionary of the First Settlers of New England", nor of the birth of two or of any of his children.

The Thomas Sanford of whom we have absolute records had seven children. I find no record of the birth of the first two, Ezekiel and Sarah. The other five were born in Milford every two years, and I think it fair to assume the same separation as to all the children, which would make Ezekiel born in 1637 and Sarah in 1639.

Thus we learn from the History of Dorchester that Thomas Sanford entered into an agreement to look after the town cows for the season of 1635, and also for the season of 1637. It would appear also from the grants of land to him that he remained in Dorchester till 1638 or 9, and possibly 1640. The grant to him April 1, 1640 was made to perfect an oral grant previously made. But would it have been done had he abandoned Dorchester for parts unknown? I can't say. There is no record of the transfer by him of any of the lands allotted to him. They were simply "booked".

Pynchon's Marriage to Widow Sanford.

After giving a brief sketch of Thomas, which I have already related, the History of Dorchester further says:—

> "Very possibly it was his (Thomas') widow who married William Pynchon of Roxbury (adjoining town) before his removal to Agawam (Springfield). If so, she was widow Francis Smith at the time of her marriage with Sanford, for she had a son, Henry Smith who was a "godly wise young man" and removed to Agawam with his parents."

The first name on John Eliot's Record, Roxbury Church Members is:—

Mr. William Pinchon: his wife died soon after he landed at New Eng. [in 1630]. "After some years he married Mrs. Francis Sanford, a grave matron of the church at Dorchester * * * his daughter Ann was married to Mr. Smith, son to Mrs. Sanford by a former husband." He went in [1636] to Agawam [Springfield] [Boston Rec. Comrs. Report vi 73].

The foregoing items in the History of Dorchester and in the Roxbury Church Records have given me and others a good deal of concern and trouble. Evidently they also did the writer of the former work, since he used the two doubtful phrases or terms "very possibly" and "if so." Now if we knew the time of the marriage of the widow to Mr. Pynchon it might help us a little but no light can be obtained from either the Dorchester or Roxbury Church records on this point. Several antiquarians hold to the belief that Mr. Pinchon removed to Agawam (Springfield) as early as 1636 and not later than 1638. (See Boston Record Commissioners Report Vol. VI, 73).

Mr. Pinchon was a man of more than ordinary capacity and importance. His residence in England was near Chelmsford Essex Co., and not far distant from Stanstead Mountfitchet, where Thomas Sanford resided. He was one of the Patentees and named in the Royal Charter of March 4, 1629. He wrote a book which had a second edition. In this he expressed some religious opinions of his own which led him to think it wisest to hastily go back to England. In 1630, he came over in the fleet with Winthrop with a wife and four children. His wife died very soon after reaching this country. He died in England in October, 1662, aged seventy-two years, showing him to have been forty eight years of age in 1638. Widow Francis Smith came over also in 1630 with a "godly wise son." She died in England, Oct. 10, 1657. Their deaths and the fact that in 1630 she had a "godly wise son" would indicate that they were of about the same age. Then again she bore, so far as it is known, no children to Mr. Pinchon. In the "New England Historical and Genealogical Register," Vol. 13, pg. 294, is a letter bearing on the subject written by Mr. Pinchon, Apr. 2, 1645, to Gov. Winthrop, but it sheds little or no light. In it he says, "She (widow Sanford) dwelt with my son Smith sundry years and she was servant to me in Dorchester before she came to my son." A note adds, "Widow Francis Smith had a son Henry to whom he probably refers, a wise and godly young man." The name of the only son of Mr. Pinchon was John, proving that it was her son that he calls my son, Smith. It looks to me very probable since she was servant to Mr. Pinchon in Dorchester where he first settled, and before she "dwelt with my (her) son Smith", that she came over as Pinchon's servant and remained such till he removed to Roxbury, when she went into the house newly acquired by her godly wise son Smith there in Dorchester, where Mr. Pinchon a little later married her. This explanation, conforming to the little we do know, is so in the natural order of things that it seems plain. Widow Frances must, at the latest, have gone into Pinchon's home on the death of his wife, to conform to the known facts.

Thomas Sanford did not reach this country so far as we know till 1634, some four years after widow Francis' arrival and was chosen in December of that year to drive the cows the following season. For these reasons I do not think it possible or even probable that Thomas married widow Francis Smith with her godly wise son, who was probably near Thomas' age. If he did, who was the mother of Thomas' first two children who have no known birth? Surely not widow Francis since she bore no children to Pinchon. If she did bear children to Thomas why did she not take them to Pinchon on her marriage to him after Thomas' death, as the History of Dorchester says was "very possibly" the case. It seems to me plain that as Thomas' name disappeared from the records at Dorchester, and as the writer of the History of Dorchester could not find him and knowing of the marriage of widow Francis Sanford guessed, as he had disappeared, that he had died and that she must have been his widow.

Nor will it hardly do to say that she came over as the wife of some other Sanford since she must have gone into Mr. Pinchon's home very soon to comply with the statement of Mr. Pinchon that she was his servant before going into the house of her son, for "sundry years". It is possible, of course, that she may have married Ezekiel, father of Thomas Sanford and that he died soon after or before his arrival as did the wife of Mr. Pinchon, though I hardly think it likely.

THOMAS SANFORD OF DORCHESTER AND MILFORD SAME MAN.

After all is said I am so strong in my opinion that it amounts to a conviction that the Thomas Sanford of Dorchester and the Thomas of Milford were one and the same person. My reasons for so thinking in addition to what I have already stated are as follows:—

In the first place the age of the Thomas of Milford well fits the Thomas of Dorchester.

Second, the early records of all the coast towns of Massachusetts, also of Hartford, Windsor and Wethersfield, Ct., do not show any Thomas except at Dorchester, the young son Thomas of Richard in Boston, and Thomas Stanford (later Sanford) of Falmouth, Me. (Portland). William Prescott Greenlaw, Librarian of the New Eng. Hist. Gen. Society, is a descendant of the latter. He can find no record of his having been in Falmouth, before 1652 and believes he was an original emigrant to that place. He had only one son, Robert. Mr. Greenlaw and Mr. Hodges have worked out the history of the family pretty thoroughly and it is certain that he could not have been the Thomas of Milford. Mr. Hodges is a Sanford by blood and has made great research to find his ancestor John. He has preserved all his data in two Mss. volumes. The Thomas of Milford certainly came to this country and it is not at all likely that he landed and went on at once with two children to Milford. If so, he was married in England, which the records do not show.

Third, The writer of the statement in the History of Dorchester that "very possibly" it was Thomas' widow who married Mr. Pinchon shows that he was in grave doubt of the fact.

Fourth, That James Savage in his great work, Vol. 4, pg. 15, states that Thomas Sanford of Dorchester went to Milford.

Fifth, That as the Thomas of Dorchester disappears from there, a Thomas appears in Milford with two children. Where were they born if not in Dorchester, the vital records of which place are lost? There was no other Thomas to be their father.

Sixth, We know from history that as early as 1634, there were as many as four thousand Englishmen in the coast towns of Massachusetts, that they were overcrowded and must have more room. But little advance had been made westward. Up to this time the people had hung to the shore of the bay. The Indians were back in the woods all about them and though they were peaceable for many years, the people dreaded to go back in the woods to chop out homes. But they were compelled to do so and did steadily on from 1635.

Trials and Troubles of Early Settlers.

The life of the settlers as we can readily see, and as we know from history, was a hard, bitter and most severe struggle. As a proof of this, reference need only be made to the great mortality of the Pilgrims who came over in the Mayflower. This vessel got into Cape Cod Bay Nov. 11, 1620, with an even hundred people aboard. For five weeks they remained on the vessel except that small parties explored the coast for the best site for a town. The place they selected had already been named Plymouth by John Smith. Log huts were built and in these the Pilgrims passed the long winter. At its close fifty one of the hundred had died. Ten years later, in 1630, the population of Plymouth was but three hundred.

For a time there was some confusion among the towns as to rulers, laws, &c. But in one thing they were in great accord and that was their hatred of Episcopacy from the power of which they had left England. They became practically all congregationalists, or, at least, those in authority. It was soon decreed that no one not a member of that church could hold office or even vote, and this was the law for many years. To such an extent did they carry church fealty and doctrine that on October 27, 1659, two Quakers were hung on Boston Common for preaching their "nefarious doctrines," and in the following year Mary Dyer was hung June 1, 1660, for the same reason. One Jeffrey Pride was sentenced to be hung at the same time, but he, at the last moment, renounced the principles of the Friends and he was released. Mrs. Dyer would no recant and so she was hung, dying with this message on her lips, "I have been reserved for this—to free the land from spiritual tyranny." Many hold that her martyrdom did do this more than any other single act in our history. So we see matters and things were not altogether pleasant and lovely with our Puritan forefathers.

As early as 1633, one John Oldham, went west through the forests to the Connecticut valley and returned with glowing accounts as to timber, soil, climate, streams, &c. Two years later a few Pioneers from Dorchester, led by the pastor of the church with many of its members, went through the wilderness to the Plymouth fort at Windsor, now only eight miles north of Hartford, where they settled, while another party from Watertown, Mass., went a little farther and came to a halt upon the site of Wethersfield, immediately south of Hartford. In June, 1636, the Rev. Thomas Hooker of Newton, (now Cambridge), with practically his entire congregation, set out through the woods for Hartford, Ct. In May, 1637, there were eight hundred people in Windsor, Hartford and Wethersfield. On January 14, 1639, the Freemen of these three towns assembled at Hartford and adopted a Constitution. It was, says John Fiske in his "Beginnings of New England," "The first written Constitution known to history that created a government".

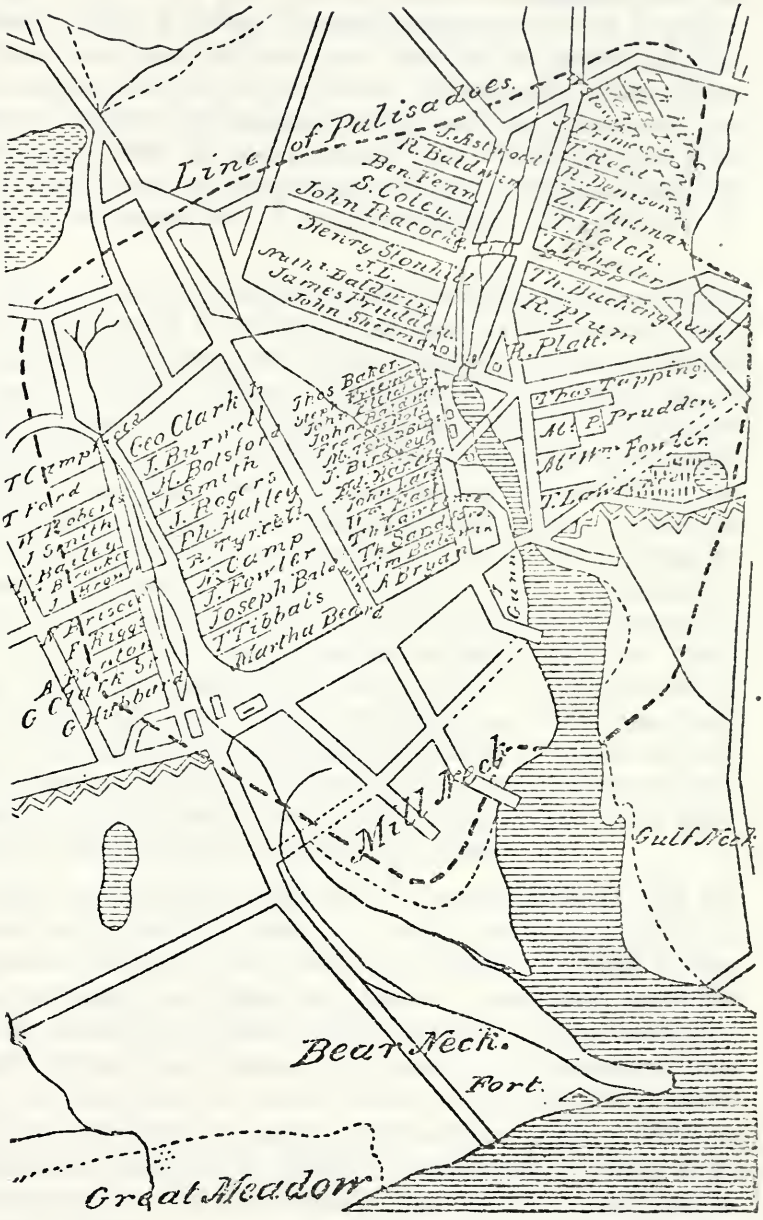
New Haven, only forty miles southwest of Hartford, was not settled till the spring of 1638. The next year, says John Fiske in his "Beginnings of New England" page 134, "a swarm from this new town settled in Milford," a place some ten miles southwest.

Thus we learn that as early as 1635 the neighbors of Thomas Sanford of Dorchester were "pulling up stakes" and journeying through the woods as far as to Hartford, Ct. He knew all about this emigration. He did not go with the first emigrants for the very good reason, as I conceive it, that he was under contract to drive the cows at Dorchester and did for the years 1635 and 7.

The Settlement in Milford.

It is universally understood and held by all descendants of Thomas Sanford who have looked into the matter, and it is also stated in all records concerning him, that he was one of the original forty-four pioneer settlers of Milford in November, 1639. This has all arisen from the fact that his name appears in the Town Records of Milford as an original Pioneer.

He may have been, I do not dispute it. But I have a serious doubt as to his having gone to Milford in 1639. My reasons for so doubting it are as follows:—



ANCIENT MILFORD

Thomas Sanford's lot was in third block from the left.

First, It will be remembered that he was granted land at Dorchester April 1, 1640, "formerly granted but not booked". It is true, but would it have been done had he abandoned that place and gone far into the interior? He did not join the First Church of Milford till January 9, 1642, and his wife Sarah, not till December, 1642. In all seriousness, I ask: Would he have been made a Free Planter in November, 1639, or even granted land till he had joined the church? I do not understand or believe that he would.

Second. There is some doubt among antiquarians as to accepting the later names in the Town Records as Pioneers of 1639. The original first volume of the Town Records, as I am informed by Frank Farnsworth Starr, genealogist of Middletown, Ct., is not in existence. The first original volume of Town Records begins in 1680 and the Town Votes in 1691. The original Church Records are extant. In January, 1677, a committee was appointed "to transcribe out ye old books what is necessary and of use." This was done and constitutes the only existing first volume of Town Records. It consists of a brief abstract of lands granted or obtained by purchase, with the names of the Free Planters of November 20, 1639. The list of Free Planters consists of forty-four names. That of our Thomas is number thirty two in the list. It is thought by some antiquarians due to minor incidents and facts that have arisen in the study of the history of the later names in the list, that the last part of the list did not go to Milford till immediately subsequent to 1639, though the committee, thirty-eight years afterwards, put them all down as Pioneers of 1639.

There is a tradition still held by some Sanfords that the Pioneers to Milford were made up wholly, or in large part, by discontented settlers at Dorchester, and Watertown, Mass., a town only a few miles away, that they formed a party and proceeded westward through the woods, taking their stock, pigs, hens, and goods with them, that it took several weeks to reach Hartford, from which place they went on to New Haven, about forty miles southwest, where they spent one night, going on the next day to Milford. I hardly think this story creditable. Would people be likely to go that distance into a native forest to settle so late in the year as November? Fiske, as I have stated, says it was settled by a "swarm" from New Haven less than ten miles distant. I think this the more reasonable. In all likelihood, the men went to Milford from New Haven in the summer of 1639 and built cabins into which they took their families in November.

However, and whoever the Pioneers to Milford were, they selected a tract on the banks of a small stream with a fine cascade which took the eye of Washington in October, 1789, while on one of his trips from New York to Boston and was noted in his diary. There they went to work clearing the forest. The settlement was not far from the shore of Long Island Sound.

(See picture of the village at an early date with names of the lot owners and the stockade to protect the people against a surprise or sudden attack by the Indians.)

There were forty odd heads of families in the town including those who joined them sufficiently soon after to be called original settlers. The town was certainly made up of, or at least contained, strong, able men. Quite a number of them rose to great distinction in the colony. Among these John Law was governor of the Colony of Connecticut from 1742 to 1750, and Robert Treat Governor and Deputy Governor for thirty years.

Antiquarians tell us that when the party went from Dorchester, Mass., to Windsor, Ct., led by the Pastor, they took the church records with them across the country and that they were lost on the way or after reaching Windsor. If this be so, it readily explains why almost nothing can be learned at Dorchester in the way of early marriages, deaths, baptisms, etc.

It is a shame that they were lost since they would, no doubt, give us Thomas Sanford's marriage and the birth of his first two children. It is my opinion and belief that Thomas Sanford married in Dorchester and that his first two children were born there. It is also my opinion and belief that he remained there till after April, 1640, when the parcel of land was granted to him that had been previously only "booked" to him. He was surely in Milford in January, 1642, when he joined the church. His third child, Mary, is recorded in the records of the First Church of Milford as born January, 1641, which is presumptive proof that she was born there.

Arrival of Sanfords in America.

It appears to me from all that can now be learned that Thomas at least came to this country prior to 1634 and probably in 1632 with his uncle Andrew Warner, since land was booked to him in November of that year, Naturally, he had to become settled and show that he was a worthy man, and also to join the church before he could, as I understand it, receive a grant of land. There is no record in Dorchester, Boston, or any other place along the coast, of Robert or Andrew. They first appear in the records at Hartford in about 1640. In addition to Robert, Andrew and Zachary in Hartford there was a Nathaniel Sanford who went there at about the same time. He died early, leaving only one child, Mary. His early death deprives us of any clue to him by the naming of his children.

There was also a Richard Sanford who came to Boston in or prior to 1640 with at least four children, Robert, John, Mary and Thomas. All these names are familiar Sanford names and I cannot help thinking and believing that Richard was closely related to Thomas. I would be disposed to think him an uncle, but Mr. Hoppin's article seems to disprove this. Of the eight children of Robert, one-half of them were given the same names as four of the eight children of Robert of Hartford.

It is possible and perhaps quite likely that Robert and Andrew did not come over till perhaps 1640–1, when they were twenty-five and twenty-three years of age, but I do feel and believe that Thomas, at least, came with his uncle Andrew Warner in 1632. He was then twenty-four years old. In 1640, Robert and Andrew had become men and called to shift for themselves. They knew they would be welcomed by their brother Thomas and by their uncle, Andrew Warner. Reaching Dorchester, they found a congested population and the land allotted, or at least the best of it. They found also, if they had not learned before coming, that their uncle had gone far into the interior. Glowing reports were current of the milder climate and rich lands in the Connecticut Valley. Emigration parties or bands were every now and then forming to go to the interior. What more natural than that Robert and Andrew, vigorous and full of adventure, should be anxious to go to their Uncle Andrew at Hartford where were greater opportunities. It looks to me quite likely that they did soon join an emigrant train in the last half of the year 1640 or in 1641 and that Thomas, with his wife and two children, went with them to Hartford, where Robert and Andrew settled. Thomas with his family, pretty soon after for some reason went on to Milford. This account of his movements meet all the early records of Thomas, excepting the record that he was a pioneer of Milford in 1639, which, it seems to me, is satisfactorily explained. Just when they came and how they moved about cannot now be definitely ascertained. We can only deal in what was most probable.

Thomas Sanford Could Read and Write.

It is indeed gratifying to learn that Thomas Sanford, the founder of our great family, could read, write and "cast accompts." For centuries prior to the birth of Thomas three-fourths of the population of England were villains (slaves in a state of serfdom). When he emigrated to America three-fourths of the people of England could neither read nor write. He could write and, of course, read, as is shown by his signature to the report on the search for Whalley and Goffe and also by his signature to the deed to his son Ephraim given in this article. His ability to read and write was, in all probability, due to the wise and sagacious provision in his grandfather's will requiring all "my sayed children and every of them to be enstructed and taught to wright, read and cast accompts" (accounts). The will of the grandfather, Thomas Sanford, shows him to have been not only a successful man, but a thoughtful, sagacious man, deeply interested in his family's welfare. He wisely educated his children, well knowing they would do the same with their children. I do not think a grander spirit, a more tender and loving parent has arisen in the family since his demise, Apr. 6, 1597, at Much Hadham, Hertford, England.

I am pleased to note that what meagre records there are of Thomas while living in Milford show that he was an active, enterprising citizen, and bore his part in public matters, though he did not achieve distinction in a political way.

Thomas Sanford Allotted Land in Milford.

In Vol. 1, page 4, of the Land Records is this curious and almost unintelligible edict, to wit:—

At a General Meeting, Nov. 22, 1643, It is ordered as followeth that whosoever in Milford is entertayned into possession of either meadow house lotts or house lotts, that he or they all and every one for every acre of house lott or home lott or meadow or part of acre of which he is possessed shall pay after the rate of four (shillings) pr acre provided a man shall be accounted to have so many acres of meadow as his proportion, (illegible) to by the rules of persons and estates according to the variation from the aforesaid number of acres caused by reason of ye different quality of meadow."

Then follows the allotment to forty-six inhabitants of upland, meadow and house lot to each. Thomas Sanford received a fair average with the others, to wit:—Two and three-quarter acres house lotts, sixteen and one-half acres of upland and seven-tenths acres and six poles meadow..

In Vol. 1, page 29, on November 24, 1651, Thomas was granted a parcel of land on an island over against his own lot to set a barn and to fence in a little yard, provided a way be left for the town to build a bridge over the river.

At a General Court held April 22, 1656, Vol. 1, page 39, the town gave to Thomas, to wit:—

"All that piece of land so far as the water stands or flows commonly called by the name of pond poynt provided that in his drawing he does not prejudice neither carting or passage for the cattell of going that way and that when he hast passage for it or part of it he shall take two men indifferent only to size or proportion, the same with other land or meadow and accordingly he is from time to time pay rates and maintain fencing for it."

At a General Court held March 19, 1659, Vol. 1, page 54, Thomas Sanford was with others allotted thirteen and one-quarter acres.

On December 26, 1660, at a town meeting, Thomas Sanford with another was chosen to view a highway for Joseph Northrup lot by the " " pond gate.

There are some other instances where his name appears in the records of the town, all going to show that he bore his part and held the good opinion of his neighbors, that he was a frugal and industrious citizen, which was shown by the amount of his estate, appraised October 21, 1681, soon after his death at £450-18s-3d. Two of his sons, Ezekiel and Samuel became quite wealthy for those times.

The Regicides—Whalley and Goffe.

The Regicides, (King Killers) Colonels Edward Whalley and William Goffe skulked into Milford, Ct., where they remained in hiding for a time fed by the plain people who were nearly all their friends.

On the success of the great uprising of the people in England, led by Oliver Cromwell against King Charles, the latter was brought to trial for high treason before a commission of one hundred and thirty appointed judges. Only seventy-four of those selected sat in judgment, and only fifty-nine of these signed the death warrant. Colonels Whalley and Goffe signed it. Colonel Whalley's name was the fourth and preceded only by those of John Bradshaw, Lord Thomas Grey and Oliver Cromwell. It was a brave thing to do as it turned out. So long as Cromwell lived they were safe. But he died September 3, 1658, when his son Richard was proclaimed Protector by Parliament. Through the efforts of the Episcopal and Presbyterian Churches, King Charles the Second was enthroned as King in May, 1660. He turned out to be a weak, frivolous and riotous ruler and got the name of the "Merry King". At once on becoming king, he set out to hunt down, imprison or kill all those then living who had signed the death warrant of his father.

The bodies or bones of Cromwell, Bradshaw and Ireton were taken out of the tombs in Westminster Abbey and hung from a gallows all day in a public square in the city. Following his accession as king, twenty-seven of the judges were arrested, tried, and ten of these promptly executed. Sixteen others of the judges escaped and fled the country, living the rest of their lives in exile and seclusion. Messrs. Whalley, Goffe and Dixwell came to New England in July, 1660, where they lived in caves, cellars or in the garrets of friends till death released them. They were brave, strong, able men. In several encounters with the Indians, Colonel Goffe appeared out of the darkness, so to speak, instantly took command of the settlers, led them to victory and as suddenly disappeared, no one knowing who he was or whence he came.

In their skulking and meanderings to avoid arrest, Colonels Whalley and Goffe, as before stated, got into Milford, Ct., in the summer of 1661. The English officials of Boston learning it, acting under orders from England, came to Milford to get them. Failing to find them, they forced the local officials to issue a search warrant as follows:—

ORDER OF SEARCH FOR COL. WHALLEY AND GOFFE.
(From Records at Milford, Ct.)

FOR THE MARSHALLS OR DEPUTIES AT MILFORD

Whalley and Col. Goffe, who stand charged

The Regicides remained concealed, the record adds, in the cave at West Rock in New Haven from May 15 to June 11. It is very evident from the temper of the people shown in a work entitled, "Wadsworth or the Charter Oak," that neither Thomas Sanford nor his co-searchers hunted for them with lanterns. The Regicides had very many narrow escapes from arrest. Both died in the home of Rev. John Russell at Hadley, Mass. During the sixteen years that Col. Goffe was under his roof he was not seen in public but once.

It will be noticed that our forefather wrote his name Sanford and also that there is no "d" in the middle of the name Sanford.

Original Deed of Thomas Sanford.

Probably nothing has been found or can be found which will more please and interest the descendants of Thomas Sanford, excepting possibly the discovery of his English ancestry, than the finding at this late date of a genuine, original deed with his signature, to his son Ephraim. This, with other papers was passed on Ephraim's death to his son Samuel and by him to his son Samuel and so on to a quarter of a century ago when Horatio Gates Sanford discovered and secured them. They were found and kept all these years in a small oak box, put together with coarse, hand made nails and filed, "Samuel, Sept. 9, 1736." All descendants of Thomas everywhere should bless the memory of the descendants of Ephraim who for so long sacredly kept and preserved these old papers. There were ninety-two of them in the box, several of them nearly as old as the deed of Thomas. But few people can boast of the autograph signature of an ancestor who came to this country very nearly as early as the Pilgrim Fathers. These papers will be filed in the Connecticut Historical Society for the benefit of all who may be interested.

In the Appendix is given a list of these papers with the names of all parties to them, including witnesses and officials, where may be seen and found the original signatures of all these parties. (See Ephraim, son Samuel and his son Samuel for further particulars as to several of said old papers).

was confirmed by Thomas' will. (See Stratford, Conn., Book 1, page 77, Nov. 6, 1681.) Our forebear used, as will be noticed, a peculiar letter in his signature by inverting the letter h. Inverting this letter as I am informed by James Allen Kibbe, the veteran genealogist of Warehouse Point, Ct., was often done in those early days, as also in England, as I learn from true copies of wills sent to me. For the capital letter "I" the writer used, as will be noticed, the letter now used for J. They did not begin recording deeds in Milford till about 1685, and so the above deed of gift is not on record.

The Village of Milford.

The village of Milford is today a bright, enterprising place of about four thousand people. A prominent man there wrote me when I began this work that he knew of but one person bearing the name of Sanford in Milford, to wit, Ephraim Sanford, a gentleman of some seventy-five years. On writing him not long afterwards I learned from others that he too had passed away. The home of our family seems to be entirely deserted by its descendants, at least the name. Such is the way of the world. The place that knew them, gave them birth, knows them no more. But there are good men and women there still. Though not of our blood, they have remembered us. As the graves and headstones of the founders of the town had disappeared and become utterly unknown, it was thought best to commemorate them.

Accordingly, in 1889, on the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the town a stone bridge was built over the stream which the Pioneers had some difficulty in crossing when entering the town. The descendants of the Pioneers built a stone tower at one end of the bridge as a memorial in their memory and also placed heavy stones on the battlements of the bridge in which the names of the founders are cut. A cut of the bridge is given in this work. The cross in this picture indicates the stone that is given to our forefather, Thomas Sanford, with this inscription,

THOMAS SANFORD
Obit 1681
SARAH, HIS WIFE.

Thomas Sanford died at Milford, October, 1681, and was buried there. No trace of his grave or that of his wife Sarah who died in the summer of that year is known. Evidently, he was not sick long since the date of his will is September 23, 1681, and his death October, 1681.

Directions for Using

Relationship Chart

First, read carefully "key to work" at the beginning of genealogical tables proper, on another page. Then trace from the record the ancestry of the two persons whose relationship you wish to find, to their first and nearest common ancestor. From this ancestor taken as generation No. 1 find the number of the generation of each of the two persons. Now, refer to the Chart and trace the intersection of the generation numbers, so found (from top and left hand margins of Chart), where you will find the relationship stated.

Examples. Find the relationship between Carlton E. Sanford (No. 9805 of record) and Joseph H. Sanford (No. 2919). Turning to No. 9805 we find the ancestry of Carlton E. to be: (Jonah 5063, Jonah 2178, Benjamin 944, Jonah 397, Joseph 136, Samuel 35, Ephraim 6, Thomas 1). Now, turning to No. 2919 we are referred to No. 2917 where we find the ancestry of No. 2919 to be: (Joseph 1196, Isaiah 484, Joseph 161, Joseph 58, Ezekiel 9, Ezekiel 2, Thomas 1).

An inspection of these ancestors shows Thomas, the Pioneer, to be the first and nearest common ancestor, from whom as first Carlton E. is the 9th and Joseph H. the 8th generation. The intersection on Chart of Nos. 9 & 8 or 8 & 9 shows them to be 12th cousins.

Again, take Zachariah Sanford No. 107 and David A. Sanford No. 1719. From No. 107 we are referred to No. 103 where we find for No. 103, Samuel 23, Thomas 5, Thomas 1, and from No. 1791 we get, David 762, David 291, Samuel 103, Samuel 23, Thomas 5, Thomas 1. These show Samuel 23 as nearest common ancestor, from whom as first generation, Zachariah is 2nd and David Austin is 5th generation. Tracing on Chart the intersection of 2 from the left with 5 from the top and 5 from the left and 2 from the top, we get the senior and junior relationship to be great-great uncle and great-great nephew.

For practice, take Alice C. Shepard, child of No. 5063, and Sarah E. Lane, child of No. 5048, and find Benjamin Sanford as nearest common ancestor, from whom as first generation find Alice to be the 4th and Sarah to be the 4th generation, and their relationship that of third cousins.

The Thomas Sanford Family

FIRST GENERATION

KEY TO WORK.—The children are numbered consecutively from one to the end. Each child is given his or her own individual number. Every child that married and had a family has, where birth is given, a cross between the number and name. Such children are "carried forward" and their families there given. These can readily be found ahead by the child's number re-appearing in black and larger figures. The numbers carried forward appearing in consecutive order greatly aids the quick finding of the number sought.

The small elevated figure following the given name of a person denotes his or her generation. In tables of children, the first child only is thus noted.

Whether you are a descendant of Ezekiel, Samuel, Thomas or Ephraim (the four sons of Thomas, the Pioneer), is instantly shewn by which of these names is the next to last in the descent cast (italics) where you appear.

To learn where all the descendants of each of the four sons can be found consult article in fore part of this work, entitled "Descendants of the Four Sons."

1. THOMAS SANFORD, b. [1607-8] in Essex County, England, and in all probability at Hatfield Broad Oak; d. Sept. or Oct. 1681, Milford, Conn. (See preceding article by Mr. C. A. Hoppin on his parentage and lineage.) m. [1636-7] Sarah, maiden name unknown, at [Dorchester, Mass.] She d. May 14, 1681 at Milford, Ct. Her name is not mentioned in her husband's will who died in the following October. He was added to the First Church of Milford Jan. 9, 1642 and she Dec. 15, 1642. (See article by the author for a fuller story of Thomas in America.) No stone marks the grave of Thomas or his wife nor can it now be located. The author of this work visited the cemetery of Milford, Ct. in Sept. 1909 and the eldest Sanford stone he could find was that of Mrs. Samuel Sanford 1726. With people so devout as they were in those early days, and with a family so well to do, it is, indeed, strange if a stone was not erected, and if it was, that it has not survived to this time. In all probability, a stone was placed at their graves, but of such inferior quality that it crumbled away. There are several early Sanford graves in close proximity in the cemetery and no doubt the graves of Thomas and Sarah, his wife, are in their midst. A suitable, substantial and durable monument should be erected in this cemetery forthwith to their memory. If it should not be done now that the situation has been made known, it would really be a disgrace to the family. Steps should be at once taken to repair this neglect and inattention.

In September, 1681, Thomas Sanford, evidently fearing that his end was approaching made his last will. His wife had taken her departure only four months previous, and, no doubt, this added to his many years of toil and hardship hastened the coming of the end with him. The children had long since married and were gone, with new duties and cares of their own. They were alone in the sunset of life, save for Sarah Whitlock their maid, whom he remembered. The will he made bespeaks the man. It is a fair, just, sensible and equitable distribution of his estate and is as follows:—

THOMAS SANFORD'S WILL.

I Thomas Sanford, aforesaid, being weak in body, yet of perfect memory & sound understanding do now make this my last Will & Testament, in manner and form as followeth.

First, I comitt my soul into ye hands of God through Jesus Christ, in whom alone I hope to be saved; and my body to be decently interred, & for my worldly estate I dispose of as followeth.

Imp: I give unto my Eldest son Ezekiel Sanford twenty pounds, besides what I have already given him. / Item. I give unto my son Thomas Sanford ten pounds, besides what I have already given him./

Item: I give unto my son Ephraim Sanford that piece of meadow, that I bought of Mr. Adam Blackman lying on an island in Stratford river, containing seven acres, besides what he hath had already./—

Item: I give unto my daughter Sarah Shute, wife of Richard Shute of East Chester, the sum of fifty shillings, besides what I have already given her./—

Item: I give unto my daughter Elizabeth Allyn, wife of Obadiah Allyn of Middletown, the sum of five pounds, besides what I have already given her./—

Item: My Will is that my ingagement of twenty pounds, to my grandaughter Sarah Shute, should be fulfilled, by my executer, as also all ye forementioned bequests, within ye term of three years after my decease.

Item: I give unto my grandchild, Thomas Allyn, five pounds to be payd when he attains to the age of twenty one years./—

Item: I give unto my son Samuel Sanford, my dwelling house, barns, outhouseing, with my home lott, & all the rest of my lands, both Arrable and meadow ground, within ye bounds of Milford, that I have not formerly disposed of, with all ye appurtenances & Priviledges thereunto belonging, to him, & his heyrs & assigns forever. And I do hereby make my sd son Samuel Sanford my whole and sole executor, of this my last Will and Testament. And I do desire & appoint the honored Major Robert Treat & Mr. Daniell Buckingham & Samuell Eells to be overseers to see this my Will fulfilled, and In wittness that this is my last Will & testament I have hereunto sett my hand & seal this three and twentieth Day of September 1681.

THIRD GENERATION

2. EZEKIEL[2] SANFORD (Thomas 1) b. [1637 Dorchester, Mass.]; d. late in 1683, Fairfield, Ct.; m. Apr. 25, 1665, Rebecca Whelpley, b. 16—. (Her name is given in Schenk's History of Fairfield as Rebecca, daughter of John and Rebecca Whelpley of Fairfield and in other works as Wickla and Wakely.)

Mr. Sanford settled in Fairfield, Ct. before 1660 where he died only two years later than his father. Was a Freeman there in 1669. His grave is not known. The inventory of his estate shows that he was a tanner and a large land owner for his time. He divided the greater part of his lands among his children during his life time. At his death his estate amounted to £356, which in dollars is about $1200, the pound of those days being $3.33 1-3.

His widow administered upon his estate, but died before it was settled, which was done by a writing signed by all the heirs in 1697, the husbands of the married daughters signing for them.

"The Old Burying Ground of Fairfield" by Kate E. Perry, 1882, gives two Sanfords only, viz. Elnathan b. 1717; d. April 26, 1727, and Ezekiel b. 1666; d. March 2, 1728-9.

Ezekiel Sanford's name does not appear in the Vital, Church, Probate and Deed Records at Milford except in his father's will.

As it disappears in Milford it re-appears in New Haven. Some writers have felt a little doubt as to his being a son of Thomas of Milford, due, no doubt, to the fact that an Ezekiel Sanford is given in very early writings as an English Engineer and the builder of the Stockade Fort at Saybrook, Ct. The builder may have been this Ezekiel or possibly an English Engineer by the name, sent over for that purpose. The author of this work has no doubt or question whatever that he was the son of Thomas of Milford.

He named a son Thomas for his father, a daughter Sarah for his mother, daughters Mary and Elizabeth for his sisters. Savage in his great work, and the Historian of Milford regard this Ezekiel as the son of Thomas of Milford.

(See Schenk's Hist. of Fairfield, Ct. Col. Col. Rec. ii 521; Todd's Hist. of Reading, p. 215; A. D. Hodges, Jr., Manuscript of Early Sanfords.)

They had seven children all born in Fairfield, Ct.

8.+Sarah[3], b. March 5, 1666; m. Cornelius Hull†.

9.+Ezekiel, Jr., b. March 6, 1668; d. March 2, 1728-9; m. Rebeckah Gregory.

10.+Mary, b. Apr. 3, 1670; m. Theophilus Hull.

11. Rebecca, b. Dec. 13, 1672; m. John Seeley.
12.+Thomas, b. May 2, 1675; d. May 20, 1757; m. Hannah Middlebrook (?).
13. Martha, b. July 9, 1677; m. Nathaniel (?) Hoyt of Danbury, Ct.
14. Elizabeth, b. Sept. 6, 1679; m. Joshua Jackson.

3. SARAH[2] SANFORD (same descent as 2) b. [1639 Dorchester]; m. Aug. 14, 1656, Richard Shute. He was a seafaring man. They moved to East Chester, N. Y., in 1665.

They had two children.

15. Thomas[3] Shute, b. Aug. 5, 1659. Reared a family in East Chester, N. Y.
16. Sarah Shute. She received £20 by her grandfather Thomas Sanford's will.

4. SAMUEL[2] SANFORD (same descent as 2) b. Apr. 30, 1643, Milford, Ct.; bap. there in April, 1643; d. Nov. 27, 1691, Milford, Ct.; m. Aug. 16, 1674, Hannah, dau. of Richard Bronson of Farmington, Ct. She was added to First Church of Milford, Jan. 31, 1675. Mr. Sanford received the homestead by his father's will. He was posted for freeman in 1669. Was added to First Church of Milford, Nov. 5, 1669. He was a man of some prominence and standing in the town. His father made him executor of his will. An inventory of his estate was taken Dec. 8, 1691, and names widow Hannah, children Hannah, Samuel, Sarah, Mary and Thomas. His widow's estate was administered Feb. 5, 1712. (Pro. Bk. 4, p. 123).

The author of this work feels that he was exceedingly fortunate in securing a small oak box filled with very old papers mostly belonging to Ephraim Sanford and his early descendants. With one or two exceptions, these papers are in a good state of preservation and quite legible. The author has made free use of them in the family of Ephraim. The only paper by Samuel is a deed by him as executor "to ye estate of his Honored Father Thomas 'Samford' ". " to his Loving Brother Ephraim Samford " of several parcels of land in Milford, dated Nov. 21, 1686. (Entered in 17 in ye new book). The deed was sealed in the presence of Daniel Buckingham and Zachariah Baldwin and acknowledged Mar. 4, 1686-7, before Robert Treat, Gov. It bears a clean, fine autograph signature of Samuel Sanford. See fac-simile copy.

In very many of the early legal papers, writings and even baptisms two years were given like that above, 1686-7. The reason of this was that the Ecclesiastical year began March 25th and the Civil year Jan. 1st, and without knowing the year used by the writer, the actual year could not be told. This custom continued until the year 1754.

DEED OF SAMUEL SANFORD
Date Nov. 21, 1686

He had six children, all born in Milford, Ct.

17.+Hannah[3], b. Feb. 2, 1675; d. Mar. 11, 1716; m. James Wright.
18. Thomas, b. Sept. 29, 1677; d. Mar. 3 1679.
19.+Samuel, Jr., b. Mar. 12, 1680; bap. Mar. 14, 1680; d. 1729; m. Esther Baldwin.
20.+Sarah, b. July 10, 1682; m. Benjamin Baldwin.
21. Mary, b. Apr. 16, 1686; d. Feb. 2, 1703.
22. Thomas, b. May 4, 1688; d. Oct. 18, 1730, Milford, Ct.; m. Sept. 29, 1713, Rebecca, dau. of Joseph Barnes of Farmington, Ct. No children. They resided in Milford, Ct. His will dated Feb. 3, 1724-5, pro. Nov. 4, 1730, names no children, but names wife Rebecca, sister Hannah Wright, dec'd, and her sons James and Jonathan of Durham, Ct.; children of brother Samuel of Newtown, viz.: eldest son Nathaniel and Samuel. (For proof as to Samuel Sanford's children in 1709, see Milford L. R., Bk. 4, p. 109.)

5. THOMAS[2] SANFORD, JR. (same descent as 2) b. Dec. 1644; bap. at Milford, Ct., Dec. 1644; d. in New Haven, Ct.: m. (1) Oct. 11, 1666, Elizabeth, dau. of William Paine of New Haven, Ct.; m. (2) Elizabeth "Gibbard". Mr. Savage says that "perhaps" Mr. Sanford was a son of Thomas of Milford. There can be and is no question or doubt in the mind of the author of this work that he was the son of Thomas of Milford from the fact that he took most if not all of his children back to Milford for baptism.

Mr. Sanford was a freeman in 1669 and was allotted land in 1680. The allotments were determined by the number of heads in the family and the amount of taxable estate, four acres being given for each head and one acre for each £5 of taxable property. He having seven in his family and a taxable estate of £59 and 10s. received forty acres. In the drawing, his lots fell on the east side of East River in what was first called North Farms, afterward Parish of North Haven and in 1786 became the town of North Haven.

In 1721 he deeded forty acres to his son Samuel, two pieces to his grandson William, and to his son John all his estate personal and real, wherein the son John agreed to well, comfortably and honorably maintain "me and my wife so long as we shall live and give a comely and decent burial to our bodies, and to pay at my death to my daughter Anna Abbott £4, to my daughter Sarah Beach £5 and to my granddaughter Elizabeth Huminston £8". Mr. Sanford left no will nor is there any record of his death.

Nov. 18, 1679, William Paine of New Haven, deeded to his son-in-law, Thomas Sanford of New Haven, "as part portion of my daughter Elizabeth, the house and home lot he now lives on." This was the first Sanford deed on record in New Haven. (Book 1, p. 14).

He had ten children by first marriage, all born in New Haven, Ct.

23.+Samuel[3], b. Sept. 13, 1668; d. 1748.
24.+Elizabeth, b. Sept. 3, 1671; m. Joseph Tuttle.
25. Thomas, b. Oct. 18, 1673; d. Nov. 13, 1673, New Haven, Ct.
26. Anna, b. Feb. 19, 1675; m. ——— Abbott. She received £4 at the death of her father Thomas.
27.+Thomas b. May 25, 1677; d. 1714; m. Mary Chub.
28. William, b. Nov. 29, 1679.
29.+Sarah, b. Nov. 26, 1682; m. Thomas Beach.
30. Daughter, b. Feb., 1684; d. Mar. 8, 1684.
31. Mary, b. Feb., 1685.
32.+John, b. Apr. 6, 1686; d. after 1753; m. Hannah ———.

6. EPHRAIM[2] SANFORD (same descent as 2) b. May 17, 1646, Milford, Ct.; bap. there in the same month; d. 1687, Milford, Ct.; m. Nov. 18, 1669, Mary, dau. of Thomas and Priscilla Powell, bap. July 20, 1645, New Haven, Ct. Mr. Powell was a planter in New Haven. Mrs. Sanford was admitted to the Milford Church May 15, 1681.

The author of this work has in his possession ninety-two very old original papers, such as deeds, contracts, releases, receipts, confessions of faith, inventories, etc., with autograph signatures, which start with Thomas Sanford and continue through his son Ephraim to Hershel Sanford of Waterbury, Ct., in 1835.

Through these papers several knotty and perplexing questions have been absolutely settled. The author considers that the discovery of these old papers was the most pleasing and fortunate find that has attended his four years toil upon this work. They were all written upon hand-made, rag paper, otherwise they would not have survived to this time. They are somewhat aged in color to be sure, but with two or three exceptions are not much broken and quite legible.

They were found in a small oak box about nine inches by six, with a slide top. The box is greatly darkened by age and put together with coarse hand made nails. It is filed in hand writing on the bottom "Samuel Sept. 9, 1736." These papers are most valuable and should be preserved in some archive. As the author of this work is a descendant of Ephraim Sanford, he can hold them with much pride. However, he now intends to deposit them at an early date in the Connecticut Historical Society of Hartford, where they will be accessible to all Sanfords and to any parties wishing to see the autograph signature of their ancestor.

The oldest of these papers is an autograph deed by Thomas Sanford to his son Ephraim, dated 25-1,-'74, (March 28, 1674, old style) a fac-simile copy of which is given on another page. He has also an original deed by Samuel Sanford, Executor of the will of his honored father Thomas Sanford, to his brother Ephraim Sanford, bearing date Nov 21, 1686. It was witnessed by Daniel Buckingham and Zachariah Baldwin, and acknowledged before Robert Treat, Gov.

He has also the original inventory of Ephraim's estate made on June 12, 1687, by Benjamin Fenn and John Smith, a copy of which, as nearly as can be made out, is as follows:

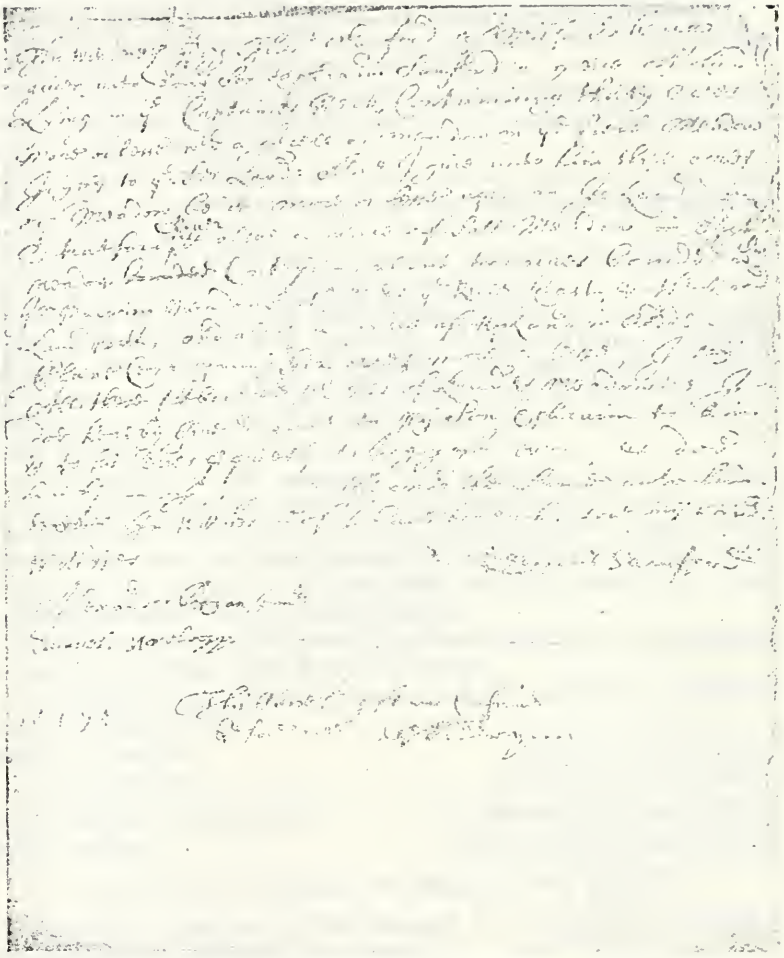
The Loving Brother's Agreemfnt.

Another paper of interest is an agreement between the four sons of Ephraim dividing the lands of their father between themselves. It is as follows:



DEED OF THOMAS SANFORD, THE FOUNDER OF THE FAMILY

35. SAMUEL[3] SANFORD (Ephraim 6, Thomas 1) b. May 9, 1674, Milford, Ct.; d. 1749, Milford, Ct.; m. (1) Nov. 1695. Hannah Baldwin, b. July 11, 1674; d. Jan. 14, 1726, Milford, Ct.; m. (2) Esther, widow of Deacon Nathaniel Parmelee of Killingsworth, Ct. Mr. Sanford was admitted to the Milford Church, May 15, 1698. Mrs. Hannah Sanford was admitted to the Milford Church, May 9, 1697. Her tombstone is still standing and in very good condition. Close by her grave is that of Mrs. Thomas Baldwin. The author of this work visited the cemetery in August, 1909. Mrs. Esther Sanford was a sister of Stephen Parmelee who married Elizabeth, sister of Hannah Baldwin. Hannah Baldwin and her sister Esther, who married Samuel Sanford (Samuel, Thomas) and Elizabeth who married Parmelee were daughters of Nathaniel and Hannah (Botchford) Baldwin.

Their ancestry on the Baldwin side dates back to Richard Baldwin of Cholesbury, Buckinghamshire, Eng., who died in 1553. His great grandson, the grandfather of Hannah, Esther and Elizabeth, born in Cholesbury, England, came to this country and settled in Milford, Ct., where he died in 1650— Hannah Botchford was the daughter of Henry Botchford of Milford, one of the pioneer settlers. He has a stone in the Memorial Bridge at Milford.

He was a corporal in a "little army" from the New Haven Colony that went against the Dutch in 1654.

Nathaniel Baldwin was a quite successful and prominent man at Milford. The author of this work has several original papers bearing his signature in a very legible state, as maker of the instrument and as a witness. His will, probated June 22, 1714, bequeathes property to his three sons-in-law, viz.: Stephen Parmelee, of Newtown, Samuel Sanford, of Stratford, and Samuel Sanford, of Milford, and made the latter executor of his will.

Among the old papers secured by the author of this work, mentioned in the sketch of Ephraim Sanford, are quite a number with original signatures belonging to Ephraim's son Samuel. Among these are, to wit:—A deed by Nathaniel Baldwin, Sr., to his son (in law) Samuel Sanford both of Milford dated Nov. 24, 1712. A deed by Steven Parmelee of Newtown to his brother-in-law, Samuel Sanford, of date Apr. 17, 1717. An autograph deed by Samuel and Nathaniel to their brother Ephraim Sanford, dated July 30, 1715. Also another by Samuel to his brother, Ephraim Sanford, dated Nov. 11, 1711. Also a deed by Samuel to his son Samuel Sanford, dated Sep. 27, 1723.

A lease by David Sanford, of Milford, to his honored father Samuel Sanford, of four acres for the term of his natural life for the rent of one pepper corn pr. year, dated Sep. 29, 1732-3. It was witnessed by Samuel Gunn, who appears to have been the attorney who drew the most of these old papers and by Joseph Ashburn.

Another lease by David Sanford to "his Honored parents Samuel Sanford and Mrs. Ester Sanford his wife" of a parcel of the Homlott with ye buildings, estimated to contain ten acres, dated Sep. 23, 1732. The consideration on this lease is, to wit:—

"For divers good causes and considerations him thereunto moving, and more especially that his aforesaid parents may be under a more comfortable subsistence while they continue in this world."

The term was for the natural life of Samuel Sanford and the rent one pepper corn pr. year. The lease further provided that in case Mrs. Ester Sanford outlived his father, she should have the use of one third of said lands for the term of her natural life.

A deed by Stephen Sanford of Milford to his "Honored father Samuel Sanford", dated Nov. 21, 1731. The deed recites that the lands conveyed are the same which he (Stephen) "lately bought" of his father Samuel and Ester Sanford his wife and that they are the same lands which the said Ester Sanford bought "when and while she was Ester Parmelee." The lands were situated in Saybrook, Ct.

A deed by David Sanford to his honored father of five acres in Milford, dated Apr. 17, 1744. Both resided in Milford.

Also a receipt dated Killingworth, May 3, 1739, by Ezra Parmelee of "Samuel Sanford by ye hand of his wife Easther Sanford, she being administratrix upon ye estate of Deacon Nathaniel Parmelee of Killingworth" the legacy of £44—5s—3d allowed to him by Probate Court of which sum 11s 6d was a legacy from estate of widow Sarah Hayton.

Also a full release and discharge to Samuel Sanford and David Sanford as executors of the will of Samuel Sanford, deceased, late of Milford by John Franklin, personally and as attorney for Josiah and "Neil" Parmelee, Jonathan Franklin, Lemuel and Ezra Parmelee, Michael Griswold, Jr., Nehemiah Parmelee and John Ward, all of Killingworth, the children and legal representatives of Esther Sanford, late of Milford, deceased. The amount paid by said executor for this full acquittance was, "thirty five pounds, money old Tenour" and bears date, Dec. 22, 1749. Among the old papers is also an order of the Probate Court held at New London Ct., June 16, 1719, distributing the estate of Deacon Nathaniel Parmelee, late of "Kennelworth", Ct., upon the petition and report of Mrs. Esther Parmelee, widow and relict of said Nathaniel. These papers taken together absolutely prove that Samuel Sanford married for his second wife Esther Parmelee, that she was then the widow of Deacon Nathaniel Parmelee, of Killingsworth, Ct. The author in all his research and assistance by others, was unable to learn who Esther was, until the discovery of these old papers.

The will of Samuel Sanford, dated Oct. 21, 1742, proved Aug. 5, 1749, gave to his wife Esther, all the movable estate that was hers before marriage and came to him; also £20 provided she quit claimed her dower in his housings and lands; to eldest son, Samuel, forty acres bounded by land of Capt. Joseph Treat; five acres in Middlefield; a small parcel in his home lot and a half acre in the meadow lot. He gave to his sons Joseph, Jonathan and Stephen each a new bible in addition to what he had already given them; to his son David, all the rest of his common and undivided land; to his five daughters, viz:—Hannah, wife of Joseph Gunn; Mary, wife of Josiah Northrup; Esther, wife of Samuel Bristol; Abigail and Elizabeth Sanford all his lands in Waterbury and the rest of his movable estate, the daughter Hannah to have four pounds less than the other four daughters and each to be charged with what had been paid to her.

The personal estate amounted to £592—13—4.

He must have been quite successful in his later years to have accumulated this fine property since in 1732 his son leased him lands for a pittance to give him a more comfortable subsistence.

He had eleven children by first marriage, all born in Milford, Ct.

The author has an autograph deed of Stephen to his father Samuel Sanford, dated Nov. 20, 1734. Mr. Sanford was a man of considerable wealth and resided in New Haven. He bequeathed one dozen large bibles to different relatives. Mr. Sanford was one of the original members of the Woodbridge Congregational Church. He was honored by his fellow townsmen and took a deep interest in the church. He made the church a present of a Baptismal Bowl and Communion Service which, it is said, are still in use. At his death he left a large landed estate, which was afterwards sold, and from which, with other funds which he also gave the parish, was derived a large part of the society's present fund for the support of the gospel.

As an appreciation of his services the following inscription was placed upon the monument erected to his memory:

"Capt. Stephen Sanford of Woodbridge departed this life on the sixth day of January, 1779, in the 72nd year of his age. His character was reputable as a man and a Christian. He had the advancement of Christ's kingdom in this place so much at heart that he made a testamentory gift to this society of much the largest part of his estate, amounting to £930 L. M. and appropriated the same to the support of the ministry in this society. This society, therefore, as an acknowledgment and lasting memory of their gratitude for so liberal and distinguished a benefaction, at their own expense have erected this monument."

Near her husband's monument in the cemetery near Woodbridge, Ct., is a stone marked, "Esther, wife of Stephen Sanford, Ob. 4 March, 1781, aged 72."

Capt. Stephen's will, dated Jan. 8, 1779, proved February, 1779, mentions wife Esther and makes bequests to the following parties, viz.: To the Society of Amity for the support of Presbyterian or Congregational ministers of the parish; to Charles Sanford "who lives with me"; to Stephen Sanford of Bethany, "my nephew", to Zadoc Sanford of Bethany; to my negro servant, Jesse, property and freedom; to Ebenezer Sanford of New Haven, "for love and good will," £20; to Hannah Harrison, Oliver Sanford, Joseph Sanford, children of my brother Joseph Sanford late of Litchfield, deceased; to my sisters Esther Bristol and Abigail Pierson; to Joseph Sanford, Oliver Sanford, Aaron Sanford, Elihu Sanford, Eunice Stoddard, children of my brother David Sanford of Milford, deceased; to Isaac Sanford. (Joseph's children, David's children and Isaac, each were to receive a "Great Bible".) On Aug. 28, 1779, Samuel Sanford of Milford, brother of Capt. Stephen, appealed from the probate of above will to the higher court. (New Haven Pro. Rk. 12, pp. 303-4-5 and 314.)

On the day of its date the witnesses appeared before William Hawley, a justice of the peace and made oath to the execution of the will and to Mr. Sanford's competency to make it.

The will is of great interest and has been the object of thoughtful study and consideration, more particularly on account of the seal in wax opposite Mr. Sanford's signature. The seal is about a half inch in diameter. The author of this work had two experienced men in Heraldry, visit Fairfield and study this seal. The result of such study by C. A. Hoppin will be found in the article on Sanford Coat of Arms.

L. Rec. Bk. 9, p. 537.) October 23, 1739, Ebenezer Sanford, of Meriden, Ct., received from his father, Thomas, 60 acres at Sport Hill, in Fairfield. (Fairfield L. R. Bk. 7, p. 19.)

On March 2, 1757, he and his wife Sarah gave to Elisha Cornwall, of Middletown, Ct., a quit claim deed of all rights in lot 212 in the "Three Mile" (Middletown L. R. Bk. 19, p. 433). He was an original member of the First Baptist Church of Fairfield, Ct.

He was of Wallingford, Ct., (Meriden), where they joined the church, Dec. 31, 1737. Was mentioned in his father's will. On Mar. 27, 1738-9, David and his wife, Patience, of Wallingford, quit claimed all their rights in the Burrows farm in Wallingford "near the stone house" to Timothy Jerome. There is an abundance of evidence that David, wife and family emigrated to Warwick, N. Y., and in about 1764. In fact, it is well known that they did. The sons, David, John and Ezra, appear in U. S. Census of Warwick, taken in 1790. The descendants of the son Ezra, now residing in Warwick, have a memorandum that this David was a son of Samuel, who was a son of Samuel, of Thomas, the pioneer, but they can furnish no proof of the line, nor are they at all certain of it.

James Allen Kibbe, a most reliable genealogist, doubted from the first this line of descent, and, after searching diligently for the purpose at Fairfield, Wallingford, Stratford, &c., became not only satisfied but convinced that this David was really and in fact a son of Thomas, who was a son of Ezekiel of Thomas, the pioneer. Several minor incidents as well confirm this lineage.

These, with Mr. Kibbe's decided opinion, have caused the author to place the above David in the line of Ezekiel of Thomas, instead of Samuel of Thomas.

They had five children, the first two born in Meriden, Ct., and the last three in North Killingworth, Ct.

On Dec. 8, 1758, Mr. Sanford's estate was distributed to his widow Hannah and his children Thomas, Amos, Hezekiah, Samuel, Lois Sanford and Sarah Platt, they being children and the only children of the said deceased. Certain proof that this Daniel was the son of Samuel has not been found. James Allen Kibbe, the veteran genealogist has given the subject a good deal of time and research and states it is his positive belief that he is the son of Samuel of New Haven. New Haven Land Records proved that he moved from Milford to Amity Parish. (Bk. 10, pp. 355, 545, 546 and Bk. 11, p. 90). His estate was adm. in Feb. 1757. He left a widow Dinah and four daughters.

Court Rec.*) He is given by his father's will, dated Feb. 17, 1728-9, the house lot, orchard and meadow, but is to work with his brothers John, David and Job for his mother till he is of age.

His home was between Newtown Centre and Sandy Hook on the north side of the highway. On Aug. 23, 1760, he bought of Nathan Sanford seventy acres of land with house, barn and cooper shop near West River in New Haven (now Woodbridge). There he lived till his death in the fall of 1766. There is no record of the birth of his children in Newtown nor of his death in New Haven. There is a grave in Woodbridge Cemetery between the Center and West River whose headstone has this inscription, "In memory of Mrs. Hannah Sanford, wife of Moses Sanford, who died May 11, 1790, in the 70th year of her age."

Moses Sanford's will is on file in New Milford, Ct., dated Jan. 16, 1760, probated Jan. 1767 (New Haven Pro. Bk. 10, p. 370.)

In 1752, Mr. Sanford received by quit claim deed the home and farm of his father-in-law, Jaspar Gunn. This farm was located in Woodbridge, then Amity Parish, New Haven. According to his will he lived late in life in New Milford, but his property seems to have been in Amity Parish, New Haven, Ct.

They had three children.

The original papers of Ephraim and his son Samuel Sanford were passed along to the latter's eldest son, Samuel, Jr. The author has many autograph papers belonging to Samuel, Jr., many of which are mentioned herein under the name of his sons who gave them, bearing their autograph signatures.

Among the old papers is a Confession of Faith by Samuel Sanford, Jr. In those early times it seems to have been quite the custom with both men and women to express in writing what may be called their Confession of Faith. Among these old papers there are three of these, viz.:—By Nathaniel Baldwin, Martha Baldwin, and Samuel Sanford, Jr. They were then deeply and radically religious. It would seem even more so than we are now. A verbatim copy of the writing of Samuel Sanford, Jr., is as follows:

SAMUEL'S CONFESSION OF FAITH.

"I have reason to praise god for his goodness in alowing me to live in a land of light under ye means of grace. I have often"

"in mind of my Duty towards god & to get an entrest in christ. I have had many good instructions by my parents to seek first ye kingdom of god & his righteousness, but yet I put of thinking myself young, and soo was Drawn away by the temptations of ye world.

I was as a fool with a pride in my hand but no heart to improve, ye same as 17 pro 16 (Proverbs). I was reddy to fear that god would leave me to myself to perrish in my sins for when I would Do good evl was present with me. I was awakened by reading that place of Scripture in the 5 iohn (John) 40 and ye will not come to me that ye might have life.

I was awakened by the death of sum persons which put me in mind of my great & last chang. I was awakened by reading the Scriptures as 50 psal 22, now consider this ye that forget god lest I tare you in peases & there be none to Deliver. pro. 29–1, he that being often reproved hardeneth his neck shall sudenly be Destroyed and that without remedy.

I hop god hath made me sensable that I am a siner and that I was shapen iniquity & conceived in sin.

I Desire to cum unto Jesus christ tho I am most unworthy, yet I fear to neglect such great offers least I should Dishonor god.

I hop I am made sensable of my original sin and the corruption of my hole nature, but reading these and isah 55–7 let ye wicked forsake his way and the unritous man his thoughts and let him return unto the lord and he will have mercy upon him; also 1 isa 18 com now and let us reason together saith ye lord though your sins be as scarlet they shall be whit as snow, though they be red like crimson they shall be as wooll, and now I desire to renounce all my one (own) Righteousness and to count all as Done that so I might be found in christ not havein on my one Righteousness but his righteousness that so I be not ashamed. Who am I lord that I should make any claim unto thee or have any part or portion in thee who am unworthy of the least of Gods mercies. Yet to Dispare will be to Disparage gods mercy but Reading thes word in Gen. 6–3 was incouraging to me and ye lord said my spirit shall not always strive with man also thes words in isa incline your ear and com unto me, hear and your soul shall live and I will make an everlasting covenant with you even the sure mercies of David.

SAMUEL SANFORD, Jun.

Antenuptial Agreement.

In those early times, the husband, upon marriage, took all the property of his wife if there was no agreement to the contrary Widows, who remarried, it seems, were inclined to make pretty rigid antenuptial agreements whereby they could hold their own property, as is shown by the following agreement between Hannah Tomlinson and Samuel Sanford.

JOSEPH SANFORD

Mrs. Sanford was the great-granddaughter of Deacon George Clark, who, with his wife and two children, emigrated to New England in 1637 with Rev. John Davenport and his congregation from Kent and Surrey near London, to escape religious persecution. They landed at Boston, where they remained one year, and then settled in New Haven. In 1639, George Clarke with other settlers removed to Milford, where he died in 1690, a planter of considrable property and influence. He has a stone in the Memorial Bridge at Milford, Ct. A house with a hip gabled roof, built by his son Ensign George, is still standing and was the first one in Milford, built outside of the palisades. He was granted some land for his bravery in doing it. Mary Clarke's father was Joseph, son of Thomas, the eldest child of George. All of these men were deacons in the church, as may be seen by the old tombstones in the Milford Cemetery.

Thomas married Hannah Gibbard, whose grandfather, Edmund Tapp, was one of the foremost men of the Milford Colony, serving it well during the fourteen years he lived there. He also has a stone in the bridge. His daughter Jane married Gov. Robert Treat. His daughter Ann married William Gibbard, who was Secretary of the colony in 1657, and assistant in 1661. He was great grandfather of Mary Clarke.

Mary Clarke's mother was Mary Platt, a granddaughter of Deacon Richard Platt, born in Barrington, Hertfordshire, Eng., who came to this country in 1638 and settled in New Haven, where he owned 84 acres, part of which is now the best part of the city. He was one of the few who settled the township of Milford in 1639. At his death his estate was estimated at £600, a large amount for those days. His stone in the Milford Memorial Bridge occupies the place of honor next to Peter Prudden, the first pastor of the Milford Church. Mary Platt's grandfather, Thomas Canfield, also one of the earlier settlers of Milford, has a stone in the Memorial Bridge. Thus the descendants of Mary Clarke have four stones by her ancestors in the Milford Memorial Bridge.

They had six children.

Aug. 7, 1769, Sarah, dau. of Samuel and Ruth (Northrop) Briscoe of Bethany parish, Milford, Ct., b. Oct. 11, 1751, d. Nov. 6, 1813. Buried in Pine Grove Cemetery. At the division of his father's estate, in 1769, Mr. Sanford received as his share (two-fifths of the estate by the terms of the will) the homestead near West River in New Haven (now Woodbridge). This homestead where he was then living he sold in 1778. From his marriage in 1767 to 1774 and again from 1778 to 1783 he lived, it appears, at Bear's Hill (now in Bethany), near his father-in-law. Jan. 15, 1783, he bought a large tract of land and woods known as Sopus Plain, on the west side of the Naugatuck, in Oxford parish, town of Derby, cleared a spot and built a home. This house, which stood until about 1883, was a small frame building with a sitting room, bedroom, kitchen and pantry on the first floor and a garret or low chamber above.

He also built a grist mill on the Naugatuck about one half mile from the Pines Bridge. The dam to this mill was twice washed away. A third time he started to rebuild with great care. A foundation was dug across the river and stones, so large that five yoke of oxen were required to haul one, were laid across in rows, "shingled", that is, leaning up stream and filled underneath with small stones to prevent the undermining action of water. When this was about half completed an unusual August flood carried it all away. No further attempt was made.

In March, 1796, Mr. Sanford sold everything at Sopus and moved to Cold Springs, N. Y., on the east bank of the Hudson in the heart of the "Highlands". During the latter part of his life he was a church member. Ten years later he died, says a record made by his son Philo, "In Sept., 1806, at the age of 58." This record is the only clue to the date of his birth, as there is no record of it in Newtown, Ct.

His wife Sarah returned after his death to Connecticut and lived with the children near her father in Nyumphs, Woodbridge, Ct.

They had ten children.

Dear Wife:—

A sense of my conjugal obligation and tender affection for you and the children whom God hath given us induces me to write at this time and I doubt not you have an earnest desire to hear from me as you have frequently manifested. I have been very sick and nigh to Death for a long time, but God of his infinite merey has lengthened out my life and so far restored my helth that I have returned to the Camp under circumstances of comfort and am able to attend the exercises of the —— and am gaining strength very fast. Hope soon to enjoy a confirmed state of helth, great and manifold have been the favors and Blessings which God of his infinite goodness has bestowed on me who am unworthy of any motive from him, may his name be suitably praised, and all his benefits Remembered by me and all concerned for me: I received your letters by "Majs" Curtis camp, am obliged to you for the care and concerne for me therein manifested.

Rejoice greatly to hear of your welfare, but am not without the greatest concerne and anxiety for you and the Children, I know the times are difficult and I consider the care upon you to be very great under your particular circumstances—the duty of parents to children is very important and as it is necesarily devolved upon you, I cannot forbare, nor do I think it inconsistent with my Duty to express my concerne for them and earnest desire that they may be well instructed in the ways of virtue and piety if they are not, Sin lieth at the Dore and we must be answerable for the neglect, and I can do my duty in no other way than by recommending them to your care and the care of a kind and indulgent Providence.

I un lerstand the neighbors are kind and careful for you which I am very glad of, as I think it must be of no small comfort to you and greatly softens your cares, be not discouraged but surmount the dificulties with all becoming Patience, and God bless your indeavors and preserve your helth ————.

I intended to come home but now do not expect this summer—it would be very agreeable and gratifying to me to see you once more and hope I may at the close of another campaign but that is uncertain. We appoint and God disappoints and it becomes us to prepare for the event of his will with all due submission and that His blessing may ever attend you. Piece be restored to our land and our hearts prepared for the receipt of so great favors is the desire and prayer of your Loving Husband.

EZEKIEL SANFORD.

His gt. gt. grandson, Harrison E. Sanford of Cornwall, Vt., has a letter written by him to his son Benjamin Sanford of Cornwall of which the following is a copy:

Litchfield, Conn., 1 1812.

Dear Son,—

Although I have not written to you for some time I have not forgotten you. You are remembered in my prayers. As nothing very material has taken place I have neglected to write. Thinking a few lines from me might be agreeable, as I always find it so to hear from you, I will write you a short letter.

I understand you are, or were, much out of health but of late are better. As to my health I took a dreadful cold last May with a high fever. It appeared I was going to be quite sick, but by keeping in for a time broke it off. As soon as I was able I went down to brother Clark's and remained two weeks and got pretty comfortable, some infirmities of old age remaining. Clark's family enjoy good health.

I understand you are, or were, much out of health but of late are better. As to my health I took a dreadful cold last May with prosperity. To obtain these they should ever feel themselves in the presence of God, and make his word theirs.

Simeon (brother of Benjamin and residing in Cornwall) urged me to visit you all but I am unable to perform so long a journey. I hope you will come and see us as soon as you will find it convenient and write me frequently.

Give my love to Sarah and all the children.

From your affectionate father,

JONAH SANFORD.

Discharged July 4, 1775.

RESIDENCE OF AARON SANFORD, REDDING, CONN.

This house still stands. Its eastern end furnished a preaching place for Francis Asbury, first Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church. A Redding resident has written: "When I ride by and think of the families that had their beginning under that old roof * * * I am lost in wonder."

In 1776, he was a sergeant in the 13th Regiment of militia, Capt. Hines' Co., discharged Sept. 7th. Re-enlisted in Capt. Morehouse's Co. Time of marching, Oct. 5, 1776. Discharged, Oct. 12th. In 1777, he was a member of the 4th Connecticut Militia. On this last occasion, he was with the soldiers who resisted the British attack upon Danbury, Ct., and says of his encounter with the enemy: "I fired towards or at them, I think, six times, but no ball was permitted to hit me." For these services as a patriot, in later life, he persistently refused a pension of "several hundred dollars" which he might have obtained. (Conn. Men in Rev., pp. 71, 469, 520.) He married his first cousin, Lydia Hawley, in 1780; their children were five sons and five daughters. He was a farmer, and at one time held the office of magistrate.

In June, 1789, Rev. Jesse Lee, the first Methodist missionary to New England, came to Redding and preached. Mr. Sanford was deeply impressed, and in December of that year, with Mrs. William Hawley, his wife's mother, joined the new Society. By this step he became the first male member, Steward, Class Leader, and Local Preacher in New England Methodism. Often he preached in Redding and elsewhere, to the edification of the people. In 1797, he was ordained a deacon by Francis Asbury, the first Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States, who was not an infrequent visitor in the home of Mr. Sanford. This residence, in fact, yet stands, as a landmark of the olden time, to which Mr. Sanford added a room as a preaching place for the pioneer Bishop.

Mr. Sanford was a man of strong intellectual powers, of the most devout spirit, of deep religious experience, and of the most scrupulous integrity in his dealings. He became one of the three richest men in Redding. On February 8, 1849, as a patriarch of nearly 92, he passed to the better life, enjoying the veneration of all. His burial was at Redding Ridge, Conn.

His descendants are many. Since his conversion, in 1789, some 25 of his kindred have been enrolled in the local or the itinerant ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, including two brothers and a sister, and also sons, daughters, grandchildren, and great grandchildren. Among clergymen now preaching as the twentieth century progresses, several are his descendants. Others are prominent in literary and commercial activity. The instance of such a long line of useful and influential posterity can have but few parallels.

They had ten children, all born in Redding Centre, Ct.

NOTE: The record of the family and descendants of Seymour Sanford by his first marriage was sent the author by Jonah Sanford, of Troupsburg, N. Y. The second marriage and descendants the author found in the data purchased by him from Horatio G. Sanford, which the latter gathered from 1880–5. This record did not give the first marriage and children. Jonah Sanford did not give the second marriage and children, but admits there was a second marriage of which he knows but little. It looks to the author that the Seymour here given is the father of the two families, but he confesses that he has no real proof of it.

The following letter is given entire because of its little items of family history, but more particularly on account of the generous, manly and noble sentiments it contains.

Letter of Garry Sanford to Mr. Hine, with whom he must have lived since he called himself his obdt. son.

Auburn, April 3, 1836.

Dear Sir,—I now attempt to write a few lines to you, I don't know as I need to make any excuse for you well know my failing both by nature and by practice. I received your letter the 19th of March. I had almost concluded that you had forgotten me but was glad that you would once more trouble yourself to write to your disobedient child. My health is good at present. I accidentally hurt my hand last fall so bad that I was unable to work for three weeks. We do a driving business here. There are ten of us at work at forks. The water that we drink here we get out of the creek which flows past New Guinea where there is a settlement of blocks on the bank of the creek a few rods above us. I will assure you that it is delicious tasting stuff to me (?).

I am very well suited with the country, but the people are hard subjects. Truth is a scarce article here, I think they deal with it sparingly. I would not believe what they say no more than I would believe that a codfish could climb a liberty pole tail first with a loaf of bread under his arm.

I am very glad to hear that you are going ahead in your business. I hope that you will get rich and then I will come and help you spend your money, for I am practicing that business now.

The pigeons fly in every direction here, very thick, but not so as to darken the sky. Understand me. You mentioned the cold winter. It is certainly the most severe winter that I ever witnessed.

Give my respects to your workmen, particularly to Deacon Hoit for it is not right that a man so amiable and accomplished as he is should pass unnoticed. Give my respects to Aunt Huldah for I never shall forget how kind and obliging you and she were while I lived with you. Give my best respects to Miss Jane and Simmons and to all my inquiring friends if there be any.

I intend to start for home within the course of four or five weeks if possible. I would mention one thing to you which would perhaps be well for you to know. I do not assert it as a fact, however there is strong suspicion resting on the postmaster of ——— as having opened letters that come from this place. If that be the fact I presume that he will get into business weather of a serious kind.

Give my respects to father and mother. Do not fear troubling me with postage, but write to me again.

This from your obdt. son,

GARRY SANFORD.

Brother Herschel,—Ireceived a few lines from you respecting our parents. I know that the place is out of repair. It seems as if some of us might repair it and still let them live there. I believe they can have a comfortable living off from that place. If I have any small share in supposed property I would willingly give it to any one who would support them through life. I presume that if they leave there they will not be contented, but you can do as you think best. I am willing to agree to anything that the family thinks best. I am glad that you think best to do something about it for it is right that they who supported us through the tender age of life should long be remembered by us. Mr. Hine please coppy the above and hand it to Herschel and oblige

Yours GARRY SANFORD.

944. BENJAMIN[6] SANFORD (same descent as 943) b. June 4, 1761, Litchfield (South Farms), Ct.; d. July 1, 1883, Cornwall, Vt.; m. Sarah, dau. of John and Anna (Marsh) Marsh, b. Jan. 8, 1766, Litchfield, Ct.; d. Feb. 28, 1818, Cornwall, Vt.

The land about Litchfield being all taken by reason of the great immigration from the coast and the great birth rate of the settlers, he, in August, 1784, with wife and child of five months, set out with a pair of steers and cart with some flour, pork and a few simple farming tools for a place in the woods, which then, or soon after, took the name of Cornwall, Vt. It is stated that his father had previously selected the tract for him, paying therefor one ear of corn for each acre. He was only able to proceed north as far as Bennington with his cart, since no road had been cut any further. Thereupon he cut a crotched tree and made a dray of it. Placing his load on it, he proceeded as far as Southerlands Falls, where he fell in with a fellow emigrant who also had a pair of oxen and some goods. They united and built a raft, upon which they placed all their goods, which his new found friend guided down stream to Asa Blodget's at the Ox Bow, then the principal place of entertainment on the Creek.

Mr. Sanford drove both pair of oxen through the woods by a line of blazed trees through Hubbardton, Sudbury and Whiting to his future home. (See Hist. of Cornwall, p. 82.) Reaching there he went to work with a will to clean the forest and make a home. From the first he was an active and influential citizen, taking part in all matters of a public nature, and especially those of a religious character. He was often called by his townsmen to places of trust, was for many years a justice of the peace, and represented his town in the Legislature for the years 1805-6, 1821-3 and 1824.

His first home was of log, and stood down on a brook near a spring. His son Daniel was born in this house. He soon built a frame house where the present residence stands. In this all his children subsequent to Daniel, all the children of his son John and all the children of his grandson Edgar were born. In 1861 this house was moved back and converted into a granary and sheep barn, still in use. In that year John Sanford built the present fine residence. The well that Benjamin dug is still in use with an "old oaken bucket."

Not long after settling in Cornwall, his wife, Mrs. Jacob Peck and two other ladies went back to Litchfield, Ct., through the sparsely settled country on horseback to make a visit.

Mr. Sanford was a very industrious, prosperous and influential farmer and citizen. When his children married, he ably assisted each to get a start in the world. He kept an account of the property and things that he gave to each, which account is now held by his great grandson, Harrison E. Sanford of Cornwall, Vt. For the property given to each child, see individual sketches.

The farm on his death passed to his son John, and on his death to his son Edgar, who held it till his death, July 17, 1907, when it passed to his son Harrison E.

The Centennial of Benjamin's settlement in Cornwall was celebrated Aug. 28, 1884, at the old homestead, (for account of which, see sketch of Edgar Sanford).

They had twelve children, all except Orman born in Cornwall, Vt.

Mr. Sanford, a man of sacred memory, early joined the Church of his father. (See sketch of Aaron Sanford.) After preaching as a supply in Vermont and elsewhere, he united with the New York Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1811, and filled various appointments on the Hudson River and Ashgrove Districts in the years immediately following. In 1815 he was compelled to retire from the traveling ministry, because of a serious affection of his eyes.

He then settled upon a farm in Redding, near his father. Of the ten children of his two marriages, two sons entered the ministry, while three daughters became the wives of clergymen.

Mr. Sanford was ordained a Deacon by Bishop Francis Asbury in 1813, and an Elder by Bishop Enoch George, 1822. After he had sufficiently recovered from his physical affliction, he preached far and near for many years, his services being in great demand in all regions which could be reached from his home. In villages and cities, in churches and schoolhouses, as well as in private homes, he lifted up his voice like a trumpet in defense of the doctrines of the Church and in entreaties to the people to become reconciled to God. His last sermon was preached to a large congregation in New York City, the Sunday previous to the accident which terminated his life. He was a man of deepest piety, and was universally respected. His influence lives after him.

Following closely in the footsteps of his father and grandfather, he became in his early manhood deeply interested in the affairs of his native town. Under the personal instruction of his uncle, Rev. Jonathan Bartlett, he acquired a fine classical education, and early in life developed a taste and talent for legal studies, which continued all through his life. His habits of close investigation into any case that came to his notice gave him the enviable record of never having a decision given by him reversed, when the cases were carried into the higher courts. During the time his father was Probate Judge, he filled the office of Probate Clerk, and on the retirement of his father, he was elected to succeed him, and, with the exception of one year, continued to hold the office until he also reached the age of retirement. In 1847, he represented the Eleventh Senatorial District in the State Senate to the entire satisfaction of his constituency, being at that time the youngest member of the Senate. He was also an honorary member of the Fairfield Historical Society.

Mr. Sanford was one of the best known Democratic politicians of Connecticut. He was considerably over six feet in height and was often called "Long Tom Sanford." In personal appearance he bore a marked resemblance to Abraham Lincoln and had many of his characteristics. He was greatly esteemed throughout the state by men of both parties, and probably no public man in Connecticut possessed a wider personal acquaintance or a more numerous circle of personal friends, who loved him for excellent qualities of mind and heart.

He was at all times a patriotic citizen, a strong friend of the government in its successful efforts to preserve the union; clear headed, always standing by the right, never flinching or compromising, or yielding his convictions of duty and justice. In 1850, he was appointed Deputy Sheriff, which office he held for six years. In 1860, elected Sheriff of the County and for three years filled the position to the satisfaction of his constituents, but declined a renomination. He served in the State Legislature in 1856 and 1877, and at various times served on important state commissions appointed by the Governor. He had a public and private record most honorable in all respects, was a just and honest man, a kind and generous gentleman, a warm, courteous and steadfast friend.

John Sanford went to Amsterdam, N. Y. from Roxbury, Ct., in 1821, endowed with a good education and an ample store of energy and determination to advance in life. At that time Amsterdam was but a hamlet. He and his several descendants have not only witnessed every stage of development in the village and city, but have been important, stirring factors in its growth, both materially and socially. No other man has been more closely interwoven with its history or more fully identified with its upbuilding.

He first found employment in teaching school which he followed a few terms there and afterwards in Mayfield, where he also carried on a small mercantile business. Returning to Amsterdam he opened a store and in a few years was among the foremost of the place. He continued this business until 1840. Meanwhile his fitness for the duties of public life had been fully demonstrated to his fellow citizens and in 1840 he was elected to Congress in the Harrison campaign. He served in that body only one term but with entire acceptance to his constituents. Returning to Amsterdam he commenced the foundation of what is now one of the largest manufacturing industries in the Empire State—the making of carpets. This business, in a somewhat incipient condition, he brought here, with those who had been conducting it, from elsewhere and about the year 1842 the first product was ready for the market. Into this industry he threw his whole energies and in a few years made it one of the most important in the place. Unfortunately the factory was burned in the year 1849. Mr. Sanford then retired from active life. His death occurred in 1857. He left a marked impression upon Amsterdam and his public spirit was felt in all the aspects of its growth and welfare.
